

Information on the University of Rhode Island's Electronic Thesis and Dissertation (ETD) Program

The University of Rhode Island requires all doctoral dissertations and master's theses to be deposited electronically via ProQuest's Dissertation Publishing service. As part of this service, ProQuest delivers to the University Libraries of an electronic copy of each dissertation or thesis. The University Libraries will deposit this copy into DigitalCommons@URI, the University's digital repository, making it available open access via the Internet. (See <http://digitalcommons.uri.edu>) The practice of archiving ETDs and making them available through DigitalCommons@URI is consistent with the policy stated in the University Manual, Section 10.42.15:

"The rights in copyright for theses and dissertations produced as part of a University degree requirement shall belong to the student preparing the material. A student must, as a condition of the award of any degree, grant a royalty-free license or permission to the University and any outside sponsor, if appropriate, to reproduce, publicly distribute on a non-commercial basis, copies of student project reports, theses, or dissertations which would include any software developed as a part of the student project."

If you do not wish your dissertation or thesis to be available immediately in DigitalCommons@URI because you are planning a patent application or formal publication, please choose one of the embargo options (from 6 months to 2 years) when you submit your document to ProQuest. The embargo period you choose will also be applied to your dissertation or thesis in DigitalCommons@URI. Embargo extensions may be granted in special cases.

For further information, please visit <http://www.uri.edu/gsadmis/formatting.html>. If you have any questions, please contact Al Gerheim at grad_formatting@uri.edu.

NON-EXCLUSIVE DISSERTATION/THESIS DISTRIBUTION LICENSE University of Rhode Island

I am submitting my manuscript for inclusion in the Electronic Dissertation and Thesis collection at University of Rhode Island.

I hereby grant the University of Rhode Island an irrevocable, non-exclusive right to reproduce, display, and distribute my dissertation in electronic format, as well as the right to convert, migrate or reformat my dissertation, without alteration of the content, to any medium or format for the purpose of preservation and/or continued distribution.

I represent and warrant that my manuscript is my original work, does not infringe or violate the rights of others, and that I have the right to make the grant conferred by this non-exclusive agreement. Whenever possible, I have obtained permission of the copyright owner to grant to the University of Rhode Island the rights required by this Agreement.

I represent that I have fulfilled any right of review or other obligation required by contract or agreement with any agency or organization that has sponsored or supported my research.

I acknowledge that I retain ownership rights to the copyright of my work. I also retain the right to use all or part of my manuscript in future works I may create.