1976

Berman, Ronald: News Articles (1976): News Article 10

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.uri.edu/pell_neh_I_11

Recommended Citation

http://digitalcommons.uri.edu/pell_neh_I_11/29

This News Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Education: National Endowment for the Arts and Humanities, Subject Files I (1973-1996) at DigitalCommons@URI. It has been accepted for inclusion in Berman: News Articles (1976) by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@URI. For more information, please contact digitalcommons@etal.uri.edu.
The Arts

Lawmakers have added a few new provisions to a bill to extend the arts and humanities endowments as the bill winds its way on Capitol Hill.

When it emerged this week from the Senate's special committee on the arts and humanities, chaired by Sen. Claiborne Pell, D.R.I., it contained an "arts in education" program with recommended funding of $10 million to develop innovative techniques for teaching the arts in primary and secondary schools by retraining arts teachers.

There were also new provisions that were passed last month by the House, but differed in significant ways from the Senate bill.

The museum services program, designed to aid science, technology and history museums, as well as art museums, in financing their operating expenses, was amended on the Senate floor. Under an amendment on the Arts and Humanities, the entity charged with developing and promoting a broad national policy of support for the arts and humanities, the House bill places a new Museum Services Institute under the Department of Health, Education and Welfare although HEW officials have said they oppose the idea.

Two Bicentennial proposals were also incorporated in the Senate bill in subcommittee.

A proposal that originated with John D. Rockefeller III to focus on the nation's goals and priorities in the next 200 years was turned over to the Humanities Endowment on a challenge grant basis. That means the fund, which would be able to draw on $1 in U.S. funds for every $3 it drums up in private contributions.

The extended Bicentennial project is to continue for the next 12 years to the 200th anniversary of the ratification of the Constitution.

Sen. Walter Mondale's proposal for a Bicentennial photographic and film portrait of America was also included into the Senate bill and placed under the leadership of the Arts Endowment. A tentative funding level of $5 million in each of fiscal 1977 and 1978 was recommended.

The Senate bill included $25 million in the fiscal 1979 budget for the arts, and $20 million in fiscal 1980, to be matched by $50 million in private contributions.

Under the subcommittee bill, each state would be empowered to create its own state humanities council, recognize an existing dual arts and humanities council or accept the current self-perpetuating state humanities committees. If the third option is chosen, a majority of the committee's members must be appointed by the governor of the state within three years. Under the House bill, only two additional members of the existing state committees must be appointed by the appropriate state agency. The issue has been a sore point between Humanities chairman Ronald Berman and Sen. Pell.

A markup session on the Senate bill in the full Labor and Public Welfare committee is scheduled for Wednesday, May 12.

Meanwhile, President Ford's budget request of $87 million for each endowment was trimmed $2.5 million to $84.5 million for each by House Appropriations.

George Mason University in Fairfax has been granted $150,000 by the National Endowment for the Humanities to index and preserve a vast collection of plays produced under the Works Progress Administration's arts program during the Great Depression.

The collection, by far the largest single assembly of federal theater project materials from the 1930's, includes more than 7,000 scripts for stage and radio plays, documents and adaptations of classical and European works.

It was all discovered in a Baltimore warehouse in 1973 by George Mason faculty members. The materials had belonged to the Library of Congress, which did not have the resources to make them available to the public and they had lain untouched for more than 20 years.

Included in the amazing assortment of memorabilia are unpublished early works by Arthur Miller and by southern writer Betty Smith, as well as previously unknown or lost plays by black writers. Also retrieved were scores for 40 ballets, 250 plays, 200 books, set and costume designs, posters and musical scores, to say nothing of photographs and musical records. A field of clover for the arts historian.

A benefit showing of "Pippin in the South Seas" will be held at the Capitol Plaza Theater in Landover on Saturday, May 15 at 10 a.m., with proceeds contributed to the mentally retarded residents of the Great Oak Center in Silver Spring. The donation is $1 and tickets may be purchased at the theater or by calling Laura Schwartz at 528-4035.

Northern Virginia Community College at Loudoun is presenting a History Through Film series beginning at 3 p.m. May 14 with "Strehmann," a study of the man who served as Germany's foreign minister from 1933-39. Subsequent films in the lineup are Leni Riefenstahl's propaganda classic "Triumph of the Will" (May 19), "Victory at Sea," an abridgment of the splendid 1950's TV documentary series on World War II (May 21), D.W. Griffith's epic potboiler about the Reconstruction era, "Birth of a Nation" (June 4), and Lawrence Olivier's "Henry V." For further information call 323-4327.

The National Archives has inherited more than a million feet of historic newsreel footage spanning the decade 1919-29 from Movietones, a subsidiary of 20th Century Fox. As part of the deal, the government will finance the conversion of the film from its original (and highly flammable) nitrate stock to new safety film, a costly procedure necessary to the preservation of old film. Movietone distributed two newscasts per week to theaters all over the world from 1919 until 1969, when TV news made them virtually obsolete.

The Walt Disney Studio is preparing to begin work next month on "Pete's Dragon," a combination live action-animation opus said to be Disney's costliest musical since "Mary Poppins." Helen Reddy will star as Nora, a lighthouse keeper's daughter who befriends a small runaway boy and his imaginary pet dragon.

The movie sports 14 new songs by Academy Award winning composers Al Kasha and Joel Hirschhorn.

Warner Brothers is gearing up for a June start on "The Heretic: Exorcist II" with announcements that Richard Burton and Louise Fletcher, the Oscar-wining Nurse Ratched of "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," and Linda Blair in the further adventures of Old Scratch. Max von Sydow will also return in the role of the aged exorcist Father Perrin, who, it will be recalled, died in the original film. In Hollywood, anything is possible.

Attention all Billy Jack projects and anybody else who still wants to be in pictures: the Price-Howard Production Company is holding auditions for actors and actresses aged 15-35, to appear in a feature-length movie to be filmed in Washington during June and July. Hopefuls who fail in these categories should report to the Biograph Theater in Georgetown between 8 a.m. and noon on Saturday or Sunday, May 15-16. The project is the first commercial feature undertaken by Price-Howard, a local outfit specializing in education and TV fare. The working title is "Television in the Machine" and it's described as a "fast-paced comedy with science fiction overtones." For further information call 881-2224.

Music

News from a Tallahassee, Fla. newspaper:

"Dummng rock music for its "appeal to the flesh," a Baptist church has begun a campaign to put the troops on the air. The music on is the record of Elton John, the Rolling Stones and other rock stars. Some $2,200 worth of records were tossed into a trash can on a week after church officials labeled the music immoral.

The Rev. Charles Boykin, associate pastor and youth director of the Lakewood Baptist Church, said he had seen statistics which showed that 40 percent of all teen-agers were pregnant by age 20, 96% commitment of which while rock music was being played.

The Arts

MOVIES

WASHINGTON, D.C., May 14 (UPI) - A new Law passed by the Senate on last week's floor may well prove to be the first of its kind in public welfare.

The bill, which amends the Social Security Act, would enable the government to provide benefits for people who are unable to work because of illness or injury. It was introduced by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and has the support of President Bush.

The measure would authorize the government to make payments to people who are unable to work because of illness or injury, as well as to those who are unemployed.

The bill would provide benefits to people who are unable to work because of illness or injury, as well as to those who are unemployed. It would also provide benefits to people who are unable to work because of disability, as defined by the Social Security Act.

The measure would authorize the government to make payments to people who are unable to work because of illness or injury, as well as to those who are unemployed. It would also provide benefits to people who are unable to work because of disability, as defined by the Social Security Act.