A lot of attention focuses on fraternities and sororities during a special week in mid-April known to the campus community as "Greek Week." It's filled with a lot of fun and games, spirit and laughter, friendship and cohesiveness. The studying goes to the sidelines while the partying takes the field. But journey back fellow Greeks and remember the experiences from the rest of these last nine months.

How about moving in on Labor Day weekend. All of the recently brotherized sisterized, pledges and borders living in, for the first time, their new abode. Phi Psi's block party. And then the homework starts to pile up.

Before you know it, RUSH! — when all Greeks give their greatest effort to show prospective pledges that their house IS THE BEST! Rush seems endless, but passes all too quickly.

HOMECOMING — Alumni return to see "how the old place is coming along without them." And of course the football game with all that BEER! . . . Oh my head is still ringing!

November brings BIDS, the result of rush. All the new pledges begin to learn the ropes and rules of their respective houses. Naturally with bids there must be some celebration.

... Sorority Bids night — fix-ups galore, and then bolting galore! A definite wild night for all!

Things quiet down for the winter except for the parties and socials which continue throughout the year. But let us not leave out one really important, yet quite often unnoticed, thing that separates the Greeks from all others — the philanthropic events. These are the many different charitable deeds which individual houses do on their own in order to raise money for a particular charity.

These events, which vary in style considerably, are very demanding in time and energy. Yet we all seem to have a great time doing them. Who could forget FJI's Run for Cystic Fibrosis, Phi Psi's Bounce-a-thon for the American Cancer Society, Theta Chi's Paddy Murphy Week and many other wild and crazy times . . .

Well, as stated in the beginning, Greek Week is a very special time. There are thrilling competitions during the tug-of-wars, beer chugs, and tricycle races . . . Tense moments come with the chariot presentation . . . And the most exciting and unified feelings are brought out in Greek Sing Night.

It certainly is a memorable week, and it is very easy to see why Greek Week often overshadows the rest of a very active school year for members of fraternities and sororities.
