I. FINDINGS

The Committee finds that these agencies have made substantial contributions to the nation's cultural and economic progress.

The National Endowment for the Arts, which celebrates its 25th anniversary in September 1990, has provided approximately 85,000 grants to nonprofit institutions, organizations and individuals in a variety of arts-related disciplines, including music, dance, design arts, folk arts, literature, media arts, museums, theater, visual arts, and arts in education.

The National Endowment for the Humanities, which also marks its 25th anniversary in September 1990, is dedicated to the promotion and support of the humanities through the disciplines of history, philosophy, language, linguistics, literature, archeology, jurisprudence, comparative religions, ethics, and the theory and criticism of the arts. Since its inception, NEH has provided 41,000 grants to colleges, universities, historical societies and museums in the program areas of education, fellowships, seminars, research, state and general programs.

The Institute of Museum Services, since its establishment in 1976 has provided over 8,000 grants for all types of museums—assisting them in their educational role, helping to conserve our rich cultural heritage, and lessening the financial burden borne by museums as they serve a growing audience.

In addition, these agencies have acted as effective catalysts for growing state, local and private support. In 1965, when the NEA was first established, only five states had arts councils. Today, all 50 states and six special jurisdictions have arts councils. Between 1966 and 1990, the NEA's States Program awarded $355.5 million in grants. State governments appropriated more than $2.4 billion to match these grants—making the ratio of state to federal support nearly seven to one. Likewise, federal NEH funds have generated $1.3 billion in private matching funds.

In reviewing the grants made by these agencies, the Committee has found a wide range of successful grants that present strong justification for this reauthorization bill. The Committee believes that these successful grants represent the vast majority of the work supported by the two Endowments and the Institute. At the same time, the Committee acknowledges that some grants made by the NEA have proven to be controversial and have raised the issue of accountability for public funds.

The reauthorization bill developed by the Committee addresses both of these findings. It maintains a federal commitment to the enhancement of our nation's cultural life through continuation of funding for the NEA, the NEH, and IMS through fiscal year 1995. In addition, it strengthens accountability for NEA funds through the tightening of grant making procedures and the imposition of sanctions for works that violate obscenity or child pornography laws.

The Committee finds that there is general support for federal funding of the arts, humanities and museums. Recent polls indicate that approximately 70 percent of the American public support federal funding for the arts and humanities through agencies such as the NEA, NEH, and IMS. The federal commitment to the arts and humanities has always been a relatively small amount of money, currently representing less than one percent of the U.S. federal budget. Nevertheless, this support underscores the importance of the arts and humanities in enriching and expanding the horizons of our nation and plays a critical role in generating broader support for cultural activities.

II. STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

It is the purpose of this bill to modify the existing National Foundation on the Arts and the Humanities Act (NFAH) to assure greater accountability in the grant-making process and to take into consideration the changing demographics and cultural needs of our population. Authorization of the NFAH programs is extended through fiscal year 1995.

While the Committee believes that the existing programs have tried to adhere to the original intent of the legislation, hearings held by the Subcommittee on Education, Arts and Humanities in March and April 1990 pinpointed problems that are addressed by the changes in this legislation. These amendments, in the form of S. 2724, make necessary changes to strengthen the panel process, to clarify the National Endowment for the Arts's role regarding obscenity and child pornography, to expand arts education through a new initiative and to establish a new program of regional arts festivals. In addition, these amendments make a number of technical and clarifying changes in the NFAH.

III. LEGISLATIVE HISTORY

The National Foundation on the Arts and the Humanities was established in 1965 by Public Law 89-209. The original Act was preceded by the National Arts and Cultural Development Act of 1964 (P.L. 88-579), which established a National Council on the Arts. When the National Foundation on the Arts and the Humanities Act became law in 1965, the National Council on the Arts was transferred to the National Endowment for the Arts. The National Foundation on the Arts and the Humanities currently is composed of the National Endowment for the Arts (and its National Council on the Arts), the National Endowment for the Humanities (and its National Council on the Humanities), the Federal Council on the Arts and Humanities, and the Institute of Museum Services (and its National Museum Services Board).

The Arts and Artifacts Indemnity Act, "an Act to provide indemnities for exhibitions of artistic and humanistic endeavors," was enacted in 1975 as Public Law 94-158 and amended by Public Law 99-194. The Federal Council on the Arts and Humanities was given authority to make indemnity agreements against loss or damage to art objects and artifacts.

IV. Committee Action and Votes in Committee

On June 12, 1990 Senator Pell, (on behalf of himself and Senators Kennedy, Metzenbaum, Dodd, Simon, Jeffords, Durenberger, Chafee, and Danforth) introduced S. 2724, the Arts, Humanities, and Museums Amendments of 1990, a bill to reauthorize the National Foundation on the Arts and the Humanities Act of 1965 and to extend and improve arts and humanities programs, museum services and arts and artifacts indemnification.

A series of four hearings chaired by Senator Pell were held in Washington, D.C. by the Subcommittee on Education, Arts and Humanities. Testimony was received from 33 witnesses representing national, state, local and private viewpoints. The hearing record remained open for additional testimony.

The first hearing on March 23, 1990 focused on the importance of the General Operating Support Program and the Conservation Grant Program at the Institute of Museum Services. Witnesses included the Director of the Institute, Daphne Wood Murray, and the Chairman of the Museum Services Board, Willard L. Boyd, as well as several museum professionals from around the country.

The second hearing on March 29, 1990 was concerned with the reauthorization of the National Endowment for the Arts. Witnesses testifying included the Chairman of the NEA, John Frohnmayer; Harold Prince, theater producer and director; Peter Goldmark, President of the Rockefeller Foundation; Garrison Keillor, author and humorist; as well as arts professionals representing art museums and arts organizations from around the country.

The third hearing on April 5, 1990 focused on the reauthorization of the National Endowment for the Humanities. The Chairman of the NEH, Lynne V. Cheney, testified as well as Vartan Gregorian, President of Brown University, and representatives of other universities, state humanities councils and museums.
The final hearing on April 27, 1990 addressed the questions of censorship, First Amendment rights, accountability, and constitutionality of content restrictions as they related to the NEA's grant process. Testifying were Maestro Mstislav Rostropovich, Artistic Director of the National Symphony Orchestra; the Honorable John Buchanan, Jr., Chairman of People for the American Way; Mrs. Phyllis Schlafly, President of the Eagle Forum; several constitutional scholars, representatives of state and local arts agencies and representatives of arts in education organizations.

On June 13, 1990 the Subcommittee reported the bill unanimously to the full Committee on Labor and Human Resources without amendment.

The Committee on Labor and Human Resources met on September 12, 1990 to consider S. 2724. One amendment was offered by Senator Coats to establish criteria for materials funded by grants administered by the National Endowment for the Arts, the National Council on the Arts, the National Endowment for the Humanities and the National Council on the Humanities. Under the amendment, a determination would be made in advance whether or not a grant application involves obscenity, child pornography, or attacks on primarily historically religious tenets, traditions, symbols or figures. The amendment was defeated by a roll call vote of 14 nays to 2 yeas. The vote on the amendment was as follows:

V. NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE ARTS

A. BACKGROUND

Each year the NEA funds thousands of projects and productions across the United States that encourage public knowledge, understanding and appreciation of the arts. The Endowment has expanded access to art of high quality in every state and has broadened acquaintance with the arts through support of community festivals, traditional musicians, crafts and inner city and rural arts centers. Nearly every citizen has the opportunity to participate in some form of the arts such as plays, concerts, dance and opera performances, museum exhibitions, media programs, poetry, fiction, folk arts and visual arts.

Endowment programs have made the arts accessible to children. For example, each year through the NEA's Arts in Education Program, over four million school children participate in classes led by artists in virtually every state. Young people are also served through grants which provide special performances for children and their families. Children also participate in the arts by visiting museums and community centers that have projects specifically designed for them.

The Endowment also benefits older Americans through workshops, classes, and festivals. Such intergenerational programs preserve skills in ethnic needlework, music, storytelling, quilting and many other traditional skills for future generations. In addition, access to the arts by older Americans is promoted through theater and dance programs in which older citizens are performers. The Design Arts Program offers programs to senior citizens, as well.

Many different ethnic groups in America enjoy Endowment-sponsored projects and productions that reach, or reflect, the culture of minority, inner city, rural or tribal communities. In this regard, the Committee was pleased to learn that over 170 different cultures were represented among grantees of the NEA. The Endowment’s attention to cultural diversity is to be commended.

The Committee notes that projects supported by the NEA are not limited to the large urban population centers. Special Endowment programs and initiatives are designed to reach all rural areas of the country, bringing the best in live performances to those who otherwise could not attend opera, symphony, theater, and dance. Through its media program and support for public television, the Endowment reaches virtually every household with high quality performing arts.

The Committee fully intends for the National Endowment for the Arts to continue to make the arts accessible to all of our citizens. Americans of all economic and racial backgrounds face the beginning of a new century. The Committee believes our nation should facilitate a continuing cultural legacy and a national commitment to our artistic heritage through the NEA.

B. ACCOUNTABILITY

The Committee deliberated extensively on the issue of the proper role of the federal government in funding the arts.

The Committee reviewed possible and appropriate additional statutory guidelines that would diminish, if not eliminate, the possibility of questionable grants in the future. However, it should be noted that the Committee also listened closely to the serious concerns of those in the arts community who believe it to be important that decisions on appropriate subject matter for federally supported grants in the arts be decided by the peer review system with the oversight of the National Endowment for the Arts.

There is a strong consensus in the Committee that there is a legitimate and vital role for the federal government in the arts. The Congress is free, although not required, to support the arts. The National Endowment for the Arts is a worthwhile and meritorious agency which has made significant contributions. This agency plays a small but crucial role in enhancing the cultural life of our nation, a role that should not be subverted to calls for its eradication.

Actor Theodore Bikel has cautioned that “in all other publicly funded enterprises we acknowledged an expected failure rate . . . but in the arts there can be none and, unless there is a 100% success, the funding becomes endangered.”

Although the Committee cannot guarantee 100% success at the National Endowment for the Arts in the future, it believes that every effort must be made to assure accountability for tax dollars. The Committee feels that there is ample room for improvement and has proposed changes to bring about such improvement.

The approach taken by the Committee avoids the constitutional pitfalls that would be raised by the imposition of guidelines that establish any prior restraint on grant awards. Professor Kathleen Sullivan of Harvard University School of Law, testified, "As applied in the First Amendment area, the unconstitutional conditions doctrine holds that government may not grant a benefit on the condition that the recipient forego constitutionally protected expression—even if government was free in the first place not to offer that benefit at all."

The Committee, therefore, strongly recommends a different approach to this problem, one which encompasses both procedural and substantive changes in grant-making policies and programs of the National Endowment for the Arts.

1. Obscenity and child pornography sanctions

The Committee amendment provides that work that is determined by a court to be obscene or in violation of child pornography laws, is not eligible for Endowment support. Therefore, if a work that was created or supported with Endowment funds was found in a criminal court decision, after final appeal, to be obscene or in violation of child pornography laws, then the funds provided by the Endowment must be repaid, and the defendant of defendants convicted in the case shall be debarred from receiving additional NEA funds for a period of not less than three years. The bill provides clear guidance on the respective liabilities of those receiving grants and establishes with certainty that no obscene work, which is, therefore, not protected by the First Amendment, will be funded with Endowment support.

The following explains these provisions in greater detail:

When are sanctions applied?

Sanctions shall be applied when NEA funds are used to create, produce or support a project or production that is found to be obscene or to violate child pornography laws in a criminal trial (and all appeals of the conviction are exhausted) in a state in which the project was produced or which was described in the grant application as a site for the project.

What are the sanctions?

Sanctions include repayment of the NEA funds that supported the work found to violate obscenity or child pornography laws. In addition, a defendant or defendants convicted in the trial will be debarred from receiving additional NEA funding for at least 3 years or until the funds are repaid—whichever is longer. Failure to repay the amount due would result in permanent debarment.

Who is responsible for repayment and how much must be repaid?

The initial obligation to repay funds is with the individual or organization that actually created or produced the project found to be obscene or in violation of child pornography laws. The amount to be repaid is that portion of the total NEA funds received by the individual or organization that were used to create or produce the project found to be obscene, provided that it is possible to separate the portion of the grant used for the work found to be obscene, or in violation of child pornography laws. If it is not possible to separate out the portion of the total funds used for the work, the entire NEA grant must be repaid.

If the Chairperson of the NEA determines that the individual or organization that created or produced the project found to be obscene or in violation of child pornography laws is unable to or has not made repayment, and if such individual or organization did not receive its funds directly from the NEA, but was a subgrantee of another organization, agency or arts group or other entity that received funds directly from the NEA and passed funds on to such individual or organization, then such other organization, agency or arts group, or other entity is responsible for repaying the funds.

Repayment of funds by the individual or organization that created or produced the project found to be obscene must be made within 90 days of the exhaustion of final appeal of the conviction, unless such period is extended by the Chairperson of the NEA for up to two years. If an agency or arts group that subgranted funds to such individual or organization is required to repay funds, it must do so within 30 days of the original 90-day period.

Who is debarred from receiving further funds from NEA, and for how long?

Any individual or organization that received funds from the NEA, used them to create or produce the project found to be obscene, and was convicted in the criminal obscenity or child pornography trial, will be debarred from receiving further NEA funds for a period of not less than three years. If such individual or organization is required to repay funds as described above, then that individual or organization is debarred until it repays such funds. If an agency or arts group is required to repay funds, as described above, and does not make such repayment, it is debarred from receiving further funds until such funds are repaid.

Summary

The overall scheme of repayment and debarment is designed to assure that the person or entity which received NEA funds and used them in creating or producing the work found to be obscene or to violate child pornography laws must repay the funds used to create such work. If such person or entity does not make timely repayment of such funds, it is debarred from receiving further NEA funds until it does so. If the individual or organization actually making the obscene work does not repay the money, then an agency or arts group who received the funds from the NEA and passed them on to such individual or organization must repay the money. If it does not do so, it is debarred until it does so.

Any individual, organization, arts group or agency that used NEA funds to create a project or production that is found to be obscene or to violate child pornography laws, and is a defendant convicted at such obscenity or child pornography trial, is debarred for three years.

The Chairperson of the NEA is charged with promulgating procedures to ensure compliance with these sanctions.
Illustration

A State Arts Council receives money from the NEA as part of the state block grant. The Board then gives $100,000 of the NEA funds to a theater group for a performing arts series. Among the performances in the series is one in which an individual performer receives $10,000 from the theater group. A criminal action is brought against the performer, and a court convicts the performer of violating obscenity laws, and the conviction is upheld in the highest court of appeal, if so appealed.

Sanctions.—The performer must repay the $10,000 and would be debarred from federal funding for a minimum of 3 years. If the performer does not repay the full amount, he or she would be debarred, unless he or she ultimately made repayment, and the theater group would be responsible for repaying. If the theater group fails to repay, it is debarred until it or the performer makes such repayment, and the State Arts Council would be responsible for repaying the $10,000. If the State Arts Council does not repay, it would be debarred until it makes full repayment.

2. Procedural reforms

The Committee has taken a number of additional steps to further reduce the possibility of grants being made without the accountability required for all federal agencies and programs.

The Committee provides for the restructuring of the NEA grant procedures by directing the Chairman of the Endowment to take certain specific actions. First, he is required to establish an agency-wide panelist bank that will contain the names of qualified arts professionals as well as knowledgeable lay persons. The presence of knowledgeable lay persons on Endowment panels will bring valuable new public perspectives to these important proceedings. A knowledgeable lay person is someone with a high degree of familiarity with the arts discipline under consideration but who does not make a living in that particular field.

The Committee has also directed the NEA Chairman to standardize panel review procedures in an effort to make these procedures as fair and accountable as possible. It is anticipated that a standard application practice will be established for every grant program as well as a clearly defined appeals process for applicants whose applications are rejected. Other procedural requirements involve the increased use of on-site visits to view an applicant’s work, followed by a written report that can assist review panelists in making their funding recommendations.

Although the Endowment is also required to keep a verbatim record of all panel proceedings, the Committee understands that this information would continue to be protected under the Freedom of Information Act deliberative process exemption.

In an effort to bring fresh perspectives to the deliberations of the review panels and to permit broader participation, the Committee has required that membership in these panels be changed substantially from year to year with no panel appointment to exceed three years.

Furthermore, the Committee requests that the proceedings of the National Council on the Arts be open to the public in accordance with the Administrative Procedures Act. The Committee acknowledges that there will be some occasions that merit a closed session of the Council. It is anticipated, however, that these occasions will be rare and that the application review portion of the Council meetings will routinely be open to the public.

Finally, the Committee has expanded the role of the Inspector General of the NEA by requiring this office to conduct appropriate reviews of Endowment grantees to ensure compliance with all accounting and financial criteria.

The Committee is satisfied that these new provisions will protect the interests of both taxpayers and the arts. The Committee believes that these separate interests are fundamentally compatible.

3. General terms and conditions for NEA grant recipients

The Committee intends that the General Terms and Conditions form provided to recipients of the NEA grant funds under Section 5 shall include on such form the following:

Repayment of Funds and Debarment.—In accordance with a Congressional directive, recipients of funds under Section 5 of the National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities Act of 1965 are requested to note the provisions of Section 10(g) of such Act regarding repayment of funds and debarment.

4. The Independent Commission

The Independent Commission which was established in the FY 1990 Interior Appropriations Act (P.L. 101-121), released its “Report to Congress on the National Endowment for the Arts” on September 11, 1990, the day before the Committee on Labor and Human Resources met to report S. 2724 to the Senate. The Committee acknowledges receiving the Independent Commission’s recommendations and will review these findings with care. The Committee retains the option to incorporate Commission recommendations when S. 2724 is brought to the Senate floor.

C. ARTS EDUCATION

The Committee believes that in order to meet the need to expand arts education in this country, it is necessary to authorize a new program within the National Endowment for the Arts. The NEA would thereby have a major responsibility for providing leadership and stimulating the development of arts education at all levels of our society, working in cooperation with existing arts education and professional arts associations, institutions, organizations and state or other public agencies.

The purpose of the new authority would be to promote greater understanding and accessibility of the arts and to foster creativity among all Americans including diverse cultures, urban and rural populations, and underserved populations that include minorities and individuals with disabilities. The Endowment would establish programs to improve the quality of arts education within our nation’s arts institutions, elementary and secondary schools, and institutions of higher learning and continue to expand existing educational programs now carried out by the Endowment. These new initiatives would be integrated with one another and ongoing Endowment programs, and would be carried out by artists and performing and non-performing arts, and educational organizations that support artists’ work, and state and local arts agencies.

In carrying out these purposes, the Chairperson of the National Endowment for the Arts would:

(1) Appoint an Advisory Board made up of leading professionals in the field of arts education, artists, administrators of institutions, patrons, educators from early childhood, elementary, secondary and postsecondary education, representatives of state arts agencies and local arts organizations, and other qualified individuals at all levels in order to assure community involvement and to provide counsel on policy and programs.

(2) Assure the integration and coordination of existing programs with the overall purpose of the arts education program.

The Committee intends that the National Arts Education Advisory Board advises the National Council on the Arts and the Chairperson of the National Endowment for the Arts with regard to its roles and responsibilities involving arts education. Recommendations for grant awards and cooperative agreements would continue to be reviewed by peer panels, the National Council on the Arts and determined by the Chairman of the Endowment.

In order to carry out the arts education program, there is provided a specific authorization funding level for FY 1991 of $10 million. This authority, however, would not be implemented until the Endowment’s appropriation exceeded $175 million.

During the past twenty-five years, the audiences for and the geographical diversity of the arts have undergone remarkable growth. Although there are many factors that contribute to this, the NEA and state and local arts agencies have played a major role.

There is, however, only one area where the trends have not been consistently positive—arts education. The lack of progress in this area and, in some cases, the deterioration of education programs and opportunities are the result of many factors; however, the Endowment’s inability to provide greater leadership has been a significant factor.

In the late seventies, the Endowment, itself, conducted a study concerning the education, training, and development of professional artists. During the past decade, there has been a sustained focus on the status and needs of arts education at the elementary and secondary level. In spite of the nature of these concerns, not enough has been done in either area.

The President, in his campaign and throughout his presidency, has focused on the education needs of the nation. Concern has been expressed about America’s work force—for our need for creativity and craftsmanship, our capacity to understand our multi-cultur- alism, and our ability to solve problems and communicate effective- ly. The arts are a vast, virtually untapped, resource for acquiring some of these competencies.

As part of the 1985 reauthorization, the NEA was mandated to conduct a study of arts education in America. The NEA report, “Toward Civilization,” concluded that there exists “a gap between commitment and resources for arts education and the actual practice of arts education in classrooms.”
The opening paragraph of the foreword to the report stated the following:

We need to help our children move toward civilization. As we stand on the threshold of the 21st century, we are concerned, and rightly so, with the quality of the education of young Americans and whether it is preparing them for the challenges of the future. Many of the challenges will, obviously, be scientific and technological—and our schools must give our children the tools to deal with them. Less obviously, many of the challenges will be cultural. They will pose questions concerning what it is to be an American and what our civilization stands for. Arts education can help this.

The report further stated that NEA's responsibility for arts education should be similar to that of the National Science Foundation in science education. The past twenty-five years, however, have demonstrated that the structure of the Arts Endowment, and lack of adequate funding, have inhibited its ability to provide effective leadership in this area.

The NEA has tried in the past to add resources to its budget for education programs but has been unsuccessful primarily because there is no specific authorization within the Act for such an initiative. The Committee believes that authorizing a new program for arts education within the National Endowment for the Arts is critical.

The Committee believes that as part of educational reform, every child should have sequential K-12 curriculum-based arts education. In addition, arts education extends beyond the traditional classroom and K-12 students. The Committee believes that arts education is a life-long experience, from early childhood through adulthood, developed not only through classroom environments but also through programs and performances of arts institutions. The parameters of the arts are endless and a person's involvement in their presentation and appreciation are unlimited.

The Committee intends that authorizing a program for arts education helps accomplish the following:

1. Improve the quality of life-long learning in the arts at all levels, from early childhood to adulthood;
2. Promote and improve the availability of arts instruction for American youth;
3. Enhance the quality of arts instruction in programs of teacher education;
4. Strengthen and support research in arts education;
5. Develop arts faculty resources and talents;
6. Support and encourage the development of improved curriculum materials in the arts;
7. Improve evaluation and assessment of arts education programs and instruction;
8. Foster cooperative programs with the Department of Education and encourage partnerships between arts and education agencies at state and local levels;
(9) Encourage partnerships between arts organizations, business, colleges and universities, and arts and education agencies at state and local levels;

(10) Support apprenticeships, internships, and other career-oriented work-study experiences for artists and arts teachers;

(11) Support and encourage residencies of artists at all educational levels;

(12) Support the use of technology and improved facilities and resources in arts education programs at all levels;

(13) Foster accessibility to the arts through education in rural and inner-city areas and among culturally diverse populations; and

(14) Foster the efforts of arts institutions and local, state and regional arts agencies to improve access to the arts through arts education.

D. AMERICAN ARTS FESTIVALS

The Committee has authorized funding for a series of American arts festivals to be held each year under the sponsorship of the National Endowment for the Arts. These festivals will juxtapose diverse art forms, thereby illustrating Americans' plural heritages and the bountiful results of democracy at work in the arts. The celebrations will enable Americans to understand the importance of art in documenting history, encouraging creativity and building vibrant communities.

The types of programs included in the celebrations will include, but not be limited to, presentations in the performing arts, visual arts, media arts, and crafts. The festivals will showcase traditional artforms, representational art and contemporary works. Each festival will incorporate educational programs to inform audiences about the arts and artists involved and each will encourage community participation in the planning and implementation of events.

The festivals will be designed to attract a broad spectrum of the American people and will take place in accessible locations where admission charges will be low or free. It is anticipated by the Committee that Americans from diverse ethnic and cultural backgrounds will be participants at all levels.

The National Endowment for the Arts should coordinate planning for these festivals with the seven regional arts organizations: Arts Midwest, Consortium for the Pacific Arts and Culture, Mid-America Arts Alliance, Mid-Atlantic States Arts Consortium, New England Foundation for the Arts, Southern Arts Federation and the Western States Arts Foundation.

E. LOCAL ARTS AGENCIES

The Committee recognizes the continuing growth and effectiveness of local arts agencies by adding a definition of the term "local arts agency" to the "definitions" section of the enabling statute. Such an agency is defined as "a community organization or an agency of local government that primarily provides financial support, services, or other programs for a variety of arts organizations or individual artists." With local arts agencies now operating in over 3,000 communities across the United States, the Committee proposes adding the term "local arts agency" to the statute wherever the mandated involvement of these organizations is warranted.

The particular form that a local arts agency takes—a not-for-profit private corporation, a public agency or department of local government—reflects the particular set of interests, resources, dynamics and needs of each specific community. Local arts agencies serve areas as small as a neighborhood or as complex as an urban metropolitan area. They serve populations of all sizes and exist in rural, urban and suburban areas. Through the work of these agencies, the arts are made accessible to vast numbers of the American people.

The Committee reaffirms its support for the Locals Program at the National Endowment for the Arts that provides various types of support to strengthen the services provided by local arts agencies.

F. INTERNATIONAL ACTIVITIES AT NEA

The Committee welcomed testimony offered by NEA Chairman John Frohnmayer that international arts activities would be a focus of future activity at the Arts Endowment. Initiatives in the international realm are encouraged by the Committee, provided that the primary intent of any such efforts is to support American artists and those who disseminate their work abroad. Given the limited funds available to the NEA, the Committee advises against diverting resources to supporting the artists of other nations in any efforts to gain exposure within the United States.

G. LANDSCAPE DESIGN AND ASSESSMENT

The Committee instructs the NEA to establish in its Design Arts Program a “Landscape Design and Assessment” category to provide matching grants to assist states, local government, and private groups in identifying and preparing comprehensive plans to recognize and to encourage the wise and appropriate future use of significant American landscapes. Guidelines shall direct applicants to systematically identify, evaluate, and comparatively assess a variety of landscape values to the public, including a detailed, comparative assessment of nationally significant natural, historic, cultural, and aesthetic values. The assessment shall be carried out using a task force of public and private interests representative of major landscape values and interests within the state, and shall develop a guide for achieving desired community recommendation for future landscape management.

Through Design Arts, the Endowment shall establish a new Design Arts grant category—Landscape Design and Assessment. The Endowment would write grant guidelines, using staff members who understand landscape design, rural planning, and historic preservation. The Endowment would establish an advisory panel made up of landscape architects, professional planners, historic preservation specialists, at least one member of a state or local arts agency's design section, and representatives from leading schools of architecture and planning.
Possible grant recipients include landscape architecture schools, state arts agencies with design programs, state historic preservation agencies, chapters of professional design organizations, the National Trust for Historic Preservation and the Alliance for Historic Landscape Preservation, as well as a variety of state and local agencies. Notification of the category would be made widely available via professional, state, and local networks.

The incentive to think about long-term landscape solutions is the objective of the Program. Since the users and beneficiaries of America’s countryside often live elsewhere, sharing the responsibility of the cost seems appropriate. Moreover, there is no ready source of local design assistance in rural areas where significant landscapes are threatened.

The Committee acknowledges that no other federal agency has such a program and most with traditional land use roles deal either with federal land or perform a regulatory role. The Arts Endowment, as the only agency charged with promoting aesthetic design quality, has a proven process for awarding grants of this nature.

VI. NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE HUMANITIES

A. HUMANITIES DATA COLLECTION AND DISSEMINATION

The National Endowment for the Humanities had accomplished much since 1985 in the development of a practical system of national information and data collection. The Committee applauds the production of a compendium of data on the humanities that will be released in October 1990 and encourages the Endowment to update and disseminate future such compendia on an annual basis. Of particular interest to the Committee will be the response of the humanities community at large to the compendium as well as suggestions the community may have for improvement and/or expansion of this potentially useful reference work.

The Committee is pleased to learn of the Endowment’s initiation of consultation on data and information issues with members of the humanities and higher education communities and encourages the agency to continue such contacts with appropriate groups.

The Committee encourages the Endowment to make known its interest in receiving grant applications for projects to collect and analyze specialized data on the humanities and for secondary analysis of data relevant to understanding trends in the humanities. It is assumed that such applications would be subject to the regular peer review process.

B. NEH RELATIONSHIP WITH OTHER GRANTING ORGANIZATIONS

Testimony received by the Committee from the Chairperson of NEH and other witnesses confirms the importance of the working relationship between the Endowment and other organizations that provide special services and support to humanities scholars. The Committee recognizes that the experience from the enhanced oversight of NEH grants with these organizations initiated in November 1989 indicates that the level of oversight applied before the FY 1990 legislation is adequate and effective. Therefore, the Committee authorizes the NEH Chairperson to return to the previous oversight arrangements.

C. DISCRETIONARY FUNDS FOR STATE HUMANITIES COUNCILS

The Committee recommends that Sec. 7(F)(4) of the Act be amended to reduce from 34 percent to 25 percent the amount of funds which the NEH Chairperson has discretion on awarding and increasing from 44 percent to 50 percent the amount of funds which are distributed equally to the states. The amount distributed among the States by the ratio of that State's population to the national population is unchanged. The Committee believes that, as the Endowments are pressed by Congress to be more accountable for the funds they distribute, such a shift in the formula used to distribute NEH monies to humanities councils is justified. The effect of this amendment is to bring the NEH Chairperson's discretionary allotment in line with the NEA Chairperson's discretionary allotment and to increase the amount of funds available to all states in equal amounts.

D. NEH DISSERTATION SUPPORT

The Committee heard extensive testimony concerning the difficulties encountered by doctoral students in the humanities in securing financial support for the final, dissertation stage of doctoral study. In science and engineering fields, advanced students are frequently supported during their dissertation work as research assistants through federally-funded research project grants. Several witnesses testified that such a mechanism is lacking in the humanities. The principal means of supporting graduate study in the humanities—teaching assistantships, personal earnings and university fellowships—typically expire or are depleted by the dissertation stage. As a consequence, many humanities graduate students must work part-time while trying to complete their dissertations, or drop out of their programs altogether to work full-time, hoping to return to complete their dissertations.

The Committee acknowledges that young humanities scholars often commit several years of their lives to doctoral study, only to be forced to extend further their time to gain their degrees or even fail to attain their degrees because support for dissertation research is not available. Such outcomes are a heavy burden to the students affected, and a considerable loss to the nation.

It was made clear by the distinguished witnesses who appeared before the Subcommittee that dissertation support need not be student aid in the traditional sense. Rather it could be research funding for advanced doctoral students completing their final transition stage to careers in teaching and scholarly research. Such support could be a straight-forward extension of one of the core activities of the NEH: the provision of competitively-funded fellowships for humanities research.

The Committee urges the Humanities Endowment to explore the possibility of establishing such a program for dissertation support—even if on an experimental basis. The Committee is sympathetic with the goal of bringing federal support for graduate study in the humanities and the sciences into closer accord. As the nation's leading supporter of humanities research, the NEH is urged to participate in this effort.

E. NEH DISCLOSURE OF PANELIST NAMES

The Committee wishes to reiterate and emphasize its long-standing request to the National Endowment for the Humanities that names of all review panelists be readily available to any interested party upon request as soon as such panelists are appointed to serve on any NEH review panel. Since the Arts Endowment utilizes "standing" panels that meet over an extended period, it is assumed that the public has access to the names of those serving as panelists. In order to be clear on this issue, and in view of the new requirements in this legislation for rotating NEA panel membership, the Committee states that names of NEH and NEA panelists must be available to the public as soon as they are appointed to serve.

Beginning with the Annual Report for FY 1990, the Committee requests the NEH to list all panelists in the Annual Report under the Division and Program in which they served. For example, if an individual serves on a grants panel that is convened to review proposals for Humanities Projects in Museums and Historical Organizations within the Division of General Programs, this individual should be so identified in the Annual Report. The names of members of "standing" review panels should be indicated as such and listed in the NEH Annual Report in the same explicit manner. The foregoing procedures will help to ensure the accountability of the NEH review panel process. The Committee points out that panelists serving at the National Endowment for the Arts are listed in the above manner in the NEA Annual Report.

VII. INSTITUTE OF MUSEUM SERVICES

A. PROFESSIONAL SERVICES PROGRAM

The Committee recognizes that the Professional Services Program at the Institute of Museum Services was originally established to provide support to the museum field at large by making grants to professional museum organizations. This program filled the void created by the termination in 1984 of the National Museum Act administered by the Smithsonian Institution. Grants awarded under the National Museum Act had provided support for training opportunities for museum professionals, research on museum-related problems and museum management.

The Professional Services Program has funded many worthy projects, including a project of the American Association of Museums that will address the critical need for current fieldwide information by supporting an important comprehensive survey of museums in the United States. Other Professional Services Program grants have assisted the Association of Science-Technology Centers, the American Association for State and Local History and the National Institute for the Conservation of Cultural Property.

While the Committee does not wish to change the thrust of the Professional Services Program, it believes that the program should be broadened to allow the flexibility to consider a wider range of legitimate, competitive proposals. This would increase the number and the quality of proposals and directly benefit the museum field and the public. Several entities included in this legislation that are not currently eligible to compete for grants are: state museums, universities, non-profit research firms and other museums.

B. GENERAL OPERATING SUPPORT PROGRAM

In the course of its hearing on the Institute of Museum Services, the Committee focused its attention on the General Operating Support Program (GOS). This program that garners the largest share of the IMS budget, provides competitive grants to museums for operations. The Committee regards the GOS Program as the most important program operated by IMS and would not look favorably on the expansion of other programs at the expense of the GOS Program.

Testimony was received that addressed the peer review process employed by the Institute for making GOS grants. The main standard for evaluating GOS applications is a standard of excellence in performance and a meeting of generally accepted practices in the museum field. As the GOS Peer Reviewer Handbook states, reviewers evaluate applications based on how well "the museum understands and adheres to professional standards" as well as on "how well the museum uses its available resources." For many of the reviewers, their only source of information about the applicant is that which is supplied by the applicant institution. While the Committee acknowledges that there is no widespread abuse in exaggerating merit on the application forms, it is possible that the process is open to self-promotion. The IMS staff has a small administrative budget and cannot be expected to travel extensively to sites to verify applications nor would it be qualified to audit the broad range of museums that qualify to apply for grants.

In light of this situation, it was suggested at the hearing that the accreditation program administered by an organization that provides this formal recognition be considered as an independent indicator of quality. Accreditation programs as administered by the American Association of Museums and the American Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums have become the accepted standard of measure for their respective fields. The accreditation process not only requires a detailed questionnaire but also an extensive site visit to confirm the profile as described by the institution.

The Committee acknowledges that many qualified applicants for GOS support have not been accredited. The process is a lengthy and careful one and does involve some cost to the institution. The Committee suggests, therefore, that the Institute consider ways of encouraging more institutions to seek accreditation through the use of its Museum Assessment Program grants and follow this up in a few years by exploring ways of recognizing accredited museums that apply for GOS support. The method suggested at the hearing was that of awarding a "quality" point to the GOS application scores as a way of lending some weigh in the direction of insuring that institutions of proven quality fare well in the competition. No points should be lost for lack of accreditation but an insti-
I.

The Committee also encourages the Institute to continue to make every effort to ensure fairness in the review process. In this regard it was suggested that attention be given to the scoring mechanism for GOS applications: Each section of the application is currently rated on a scoring system of one to seven points, one being the lowest and seven being the highest. The Committee understands that, ratings of 4, 5 or 6 on a single section often make the difference of success or failure in an application. Since there is virtually no standard of measure used by reviewers to distinguish among these critical levels of quality, the Committee urges the Institute to develop sharper criteria for grade levels in an effort to be fairer to all applicants.

While the Institute has already indicated a desire to move toward a system of panel review whereby reviewers meet face to face to discuss proposals, the Committee strongly encourages efforts in this direction. It is the opinion of the Committee that the isolation of individual field reviewers can jeopardize the fairness and consistency of the review process. While higher administrative costs are inevitable with a panel review system, the objectivity and fairness gained would be well worth the effort in the view of the Committee. In addition, the Committee urges the Institute to seek out the most qualified museum professionals to serve as application reviewers. Reviewers must have broad experience in museum management and administration in order to provide the most reliable and valid reviews.

VIII. ARTS AND ARTIFACTS INDEMNITY PROGRAM

The Arts and Artifacts Indemnity Program was created in 1975 by Congress for the purposes of minimizing the costs of insuring international exhibitions and making cultural treasures accessible to museum visitors world-wide. The program is administered by the Museum Program of the National Endowment for the Arts, on behalf of the Federal Council on the Arts and Humanities. An Indemnity Advisory panel makes recommendations to the Federal Council which, in turn, decides which exhibitions will receive indemnification.

In fifteen years, the program has been able to indemnify 328 exhibitions, saving the organizers nearly $40 million in commercial insurance premiums. The government's costs have been limited to administrative expenses and two claims: one paid in 1984 for $10,000 and one in 1989 for $4,700.

By almost any measure, the Indemnity Program has been an unqualified success. The Committee wishes to commend members of the Indemnity Advisory Panel, members of the Federal Council and Arts Endowment staff who have contributed to the success of this worthwhile and cost-effective program.

A few changes are proposed to increase the effectiveness of the Indemnity Program and to further benefit the American public. First, the Committee proposes to amend the statute by increasing the overall amount of coverage available from the current statutory limit of $1,200,000,000 to $5,000,000,000 and the amount of indemnity available for a single exhibition from $125,000,000 to $500,000,000. The Committee believes that these higher limits can be justified by the dramatic rise in the value of individual works of art as well as by the increased demand for coverage. The upward adjustments are defensible if the Program is to continue to help make possible exhibitions of great works of art throughout the country. The Committee expects that any further increases in the indemnity limits will not occur before the Arts and Artifacts Indemnity Act is next reauthorized or until 1995, whichever occurs later.

Secondly, the Committee proposes widening eligibility under the Indemnity Program to include coverage of U.S.-owned objects in exhibitions that also include foreign-owned loans. Under the current guidelines, U.S.-owned loans may be indemnified only when exhibited abroad, and foreign-owned objects are indemnified while on exhibition in the United States. The Committee believes that if an exhibition of loans from abroad meets the criteria of having educational, cultural, historical or scientific value, and is certified by the Director of the United States Information Agency as being in the National interest, the U.S.-owned loans to the exhibition should also be eligible for government indemnification.

This modification would provide additional relief for borrowing institutions without significantly adding to the government's exposure, since coverage during international transit (which is the time of greatest risk) would not be required for the U.S.-owned loans.

The Committee wishes to stress that this amendment is not intended to encourage any major shift in emphasis in existing indemnity practice. It is expected that the Federal Council will continue to provide indemnity coverage primarily for exhibitions of objects coming to the United States from abroad, and that coverage of the U.S.-owned loans to such exhibitions is a small but important, technical adjustment.

Finally, the Committee urges the Federal Council to redouble its efforts to distribute indemnity coverage equitably and to ensure that the widest range of museums, including small institutions, are participants in the Program.

IX. MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS AND VIEWS

A. PRESERVING AMERICA'S HERITAGE

The Committee was pleased to learn that the Arts and Humanities Endowments and the Institute of Museum Services have continue to provide support for the care and conservation of our nation's heritage, which is embodied in its:

- Artistic works;
- Documents, books, film and information on magnetic media;
- Historic structures;
- Historical objects;
- Material evidence of past and present cultures; and
- Natural science collections.

These are irreplaceable treasures that tell us where we have been and where we are going in the future. Viewed another way, these are the capital resources we must now care for so they will be available to present and future generations.
Reauthorization of the National Endowments for the Arts and the Humanities and the Institute of Museum Services is essential to continuing the progress that has been made toward developing and implementing a national conservation strategy. Such a strategy will comprehensively address collections care needs and enhance the partnership of support from individuals, businesses, foundations, and state and local governments. Through federal incentive grants, the Endowments and the Institute provide leadership to thousands of private and state and local government institutions which hold treasures in trust for the American people.

The Committee wishes to recognize the strides made by the Endowments and the Institute since the last reauthorization in strengthening their programs that address the conservation needs of America's cultural patrimony. In some cases, additional resources have wisely been allocated to these efforts. For example, the Institute of Museum Services recently established the Conservation Assessment Program (CAP), administered by the National Institute for the Conservation of Cultural Property, the umbrella organization for many conservation and preservation endeavors. CAP is a welcome funding program that will assist a participating institution identifying its own conservation needs and priorities.

In addition, the Committee applauds the Humanities Endowment's Office of Preservation for expanding its attention to include the preservation of objects of material culture that are housed in our nation's universities and museums. Objects in these collections form an integral part of the record of civilization and, together with written documents in libraries and archives, provide the basis for continued learning, research and appreciation of the humanities. The Office of Preservation has an excellent ongoing program that assists institutions in preserving significant resources for humanities research, such as books, newspapers, films and photographs.

Testimony received by the Subcommittee revealed that the deteriorating condition of many collections of material culture has been caused by inadequate or non-existent environmental and security controls, improper storage facilities and insufficient or total lack of conservation treatment. In addition, there is a severe shortage of professionally-trained conservators and collections care technicians to cope with the growing crisis. The National Heritage Preservation Program at the NEH was designed to meet such needs. The Committee urges the expansion of support for this important new initiative.

B. FEDERAL, STATE AND LOCAL SUPPORT FOR THE ARTS

The Committee acknowledges that over the last twenty-five years there have been many important changes in how the arts are supported in the United States. When the National Endowment for the Arts was first authorized in 1965, there was virtually no public funding for the arts at the federal, state or local levels. With the creation of the NEA came the impetus at all three levels for the government to take on more of a role in supporting the arts. At first the Federal government, through the Endowment, took primary responsibility and appropriated the largest single amount for the arts. The states took secondary responsibility through the state arts agencies and local governments took third place with very modest appropriated funds. As the Endowment grew, the state and local governments were inspired to increase their support such that in the last five years the equation has reversed. Now local arts agencies receive well over $500 million from local appropriations, states are funding the arts at over $250 million and the Federal government is third with a current appropriation of $171 million.

The Committee is aware of the fact that as the funding levels change so does the role of the money that is generated from these three different sources. For example, local government with greater dollars input is taking on more of an operating support role rather than merely program support. In light of these changing levels and roles of government arts funding, the Committee believes it is important to study how these funds may be used most effectively. It therefore asks that a study be undertaken by the Federal Council on the Arts and Humanities to consider the changing roles and impact of such support for the arts at each level. The Committee believes that such a study should be undertaken and submitted to Congress before any steps are taken to reorganize the National Endowment for the Arts in such a way that would reallocate significant amounts of federal funds to state or local arts agencies. If the study should make a compelling case for assigning additional federal funds to state arts agencies with a resulting smaller role for the Federal government, the Committee will consider such steps at an appropriate time in the future.

C. INDEPENDENCE OF ARTS AND HUMANITIES COUNCILS

Section 4(c) of the Act states that “In the administration of this Act no department, agency, officer, or employee of the United States shall exercise any direction, supervision, or control over the policy determination, personnel, or curriculum, or the administration or operation of any school or other non-Federal agency, institution, organization, or association.” The Committee wishes to alleviate any possibility of misinterpretation by clarifying that the protection provided by this provision of the Act extends to arts and humanities councils in the states.

The costs of this bill fall in Function 500.

Basis of estimate: S. 2724 extends and improves arts and humanities programs, museum services, and arts and artifacts indemnification. The authorization levels for 1991 are stated in the bill. The 1992–1995 estimated levels of authorization are the 1991 levels increased for projected annual inflation, except for the American Arts Celebration authorization, which is stated for 1991–1995. Estimated outlays assume full appropriation of the amounts authorized and assume continuation of the current spending patterns. The bill proposes a salary reduction for the Director of the Institute of Museum Services, which would result in a cost savings of an estimated $18,000 for 1991.

This bill also amends the Arts and Artifacts Indemnity Act. The maximum limits of coverage for agreements entered into by the Council are currently $1.2 billion in total and $125 million for a single exhibit. This amendment would raise the current limit for the aggregate maximum amount of coverage to $5 billion, increasing the potential liability to the government by $3.8 billion. It is not known if, or when, any of the $3.8 billion would need to be funded. Since its enactment only two claims have ever been filed. The most recent claim was made in 1989 and was for $4,700. While there could be increased costs to the federal government, CBO has no basis on which to make a precise estimate.

6. Estimated cost to State and local government: The federal share of grants and agreements entered into for the purpose of encouraging and developing arts education cannot exceed 50 percent of the cost of the activity for which the grant is made. State and local governments, or private entities would assume the remaining cost of the activity.

7. Estimate comparison: None.

8. Previous CBO estimate: CBO prepared a cost estimate for H.R. 4825, which also amended the National Foundation of the Arts and Humanities Act of 1965, for the House Committee on Education and Labor on June 25, 1990.

XI. SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS

ARTS, HUMANITIES, AND MUSEUMS AMENDMENTS OF 1990

A BILL To amend the National Foundation on the Arts and the Humanities Act of 1965, as amended (20 U.S.C. 951 et seq.), and for other purposes

Title I: National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities

Section 101

Section 101(1) of the bill amends the definition of “the arts” in section 3(a) of the National Foundation on the Arts and the Humanities Act of 1965, hereafter referred to as “Act”, to recognize explicitly the inclusion of the traditional arts as practiced throughout the country within that term.

Section 101(2) of the bill amends the definition of the term “project” in section 3(d) of the Act to underscore that programs which enhance public knowledge and understanding of the arts should be available to all peoples throughout the nation.

Section 101(3) of the bill changes the internal section references of section 3(d) of the Act to the Code section numbers and amends the definition of “project” in section 3(d) of the Act so that a National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) preservation project could use grant funds for renovation and construction purposes. Currently, NEH may fund renovation and construction activities only with challenge grant funds.

Section 101(4) of the bill defines “local arts agency” as a community organization or an agency of local government which provides support and services for a variety of arts organizations or artists.

Section 102(1) of the bill makes several changes to section 5(c) of the Act. Paragraph (2) is amended to recognize that excellence is embodied in the artistic standards applicable to the traditional arts. Paragraph (5) is amended to reference education explicitly among the types of arts projects which may be supported. New paragraphs (8) and (9) are added: the former describing organizational and managerial assistance to arts organizations; the latter recognizing the authority of the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) to support international arts activities. Paragraph (9) conforms the NEA's basic grant-making authority to that of the NEH, which was amended for this purpose in 1985.

Section 102(2) of the bill revises certain reporting requirements for state arts agencies as outlined in section 5(g)(2)(E) of the Act. Currently, state arts agencies are required by the Act to provide information annually on their activities over the preceding two years. The bill requires this information to be reported annually only for the most recent preceding year for which information is available. The bill changes the requirement of reporting this information from the preceding two years to only the preceding year because elsewhere, the state has already agreed to provide annual reports. This method was decided upon after a costly and intense study undertaken with the state arts agencies to create an annual information collection system. The change would also prevent the undesirable effect of receiving duplicative information. The bill also increases the scope of the reporting requirement to include all projects funded by the arts agencies. This change also makes the requirement more compatible with existing state information.

Section 102(3) of the bill amends the NEA Challenge Grant program authority as outlined in section 5(l)(1) of the Act to include a new emphasis for the use of Challenge grants: stimulating artistic activity and awareness with respect to the varied cultural traditions throughout the nation.

Section 102(4) of the bill strikes out the requirement in section 5(m) of the Act that a "national information and data collection" system be developed by NEA and inserts a requirement that such a system be employed. This change is being made because the system has already been developed pursuant to the requirements of the 1985 reauthorization. The provision that a plan be submitted to Congress within one year of the effective date of the 1985 Act has been accomplished and, therefore, that provision is also being deleted. This section deletes the provision of the last sentence which currently provides that the state of the arts report was to be submitted by October 1, 1988 and biennially thereafter. The report for 1988 was submitted and a second one will be submitted in accordance with the current law by October 1, 1990. The bill would require submission of the next report in 1992, and quadrennially thereafter. Generally, changes in the arts fields do not occur so rapidly as to warrant a full-scale report to the Congress and the President every two years. A four-year interval would provide more perspective and thus permit a more significant report. Developments that might occur between reports could be brought to the attention of Congress through the NEA planning documents, Congressional budget submissions and reports, or other appropriate formats.

Section 103

Section 103 of the bill amends section 6 of the Act to include local arts agency leaders as possible members eligible for selection to the National Council on the Arts.

Section 104

Section 104(1) of the bill amends the current statutory language to provide that the National Endowment for the Humanities is being created. The current language states that “a” National Endowment is being created.

Section 104(2) of the bill amends the introductory paragraph of section 7(c) of the Act to provide for the different means by which the NEH Chairperson may carry out the nine program areas set forth. The amendment specifically provides that “contracts, grants, loans, and other forms of assistance” may be used by the Chairperson. The understanding has always been that the Chairperson has had such authority, even though such references only appear in paragraphs 2, 3, and 7 of Section 7(c) of the Act. Congress provided NEA with express authority to enter into contracts in 1967 when Section 7(c) was amended to provide authority to carry out a program of “contracts with, or grants-in-aid to, groups or individuals.” Because the general authority has been extended to all programs, reference to the particular methods, e.g., contracts, grants and loans, in paragraphs 2, 3, and 7 of Section 7(c) have been deleted.

Also, it amends Section 7(c) of the Act by adding paragraph (10), which pertains to fostering interchange of information in the humanities, by adding to the Chairperson’s authority to foster programs and projects which provide access and preservation of certain materials. Reference to “projects” allows preservation funds to be used for renovation and construction.

Section 104(3) of the bill makes a technical correction in the term used in section 7(d) of the Act to describe the Chairperson’s responsibility for coordinating NEH’s programs with other federal programs.

Section 104(4)(A) of the bill specifies that whenever a State chooses to establish a State agency to administer the State’s humanities plan, that State must designate the humanities council which is in existence on the date the State agency is established as the State agency. The current statutory language in section 7(f)(2)(A) requires only that humanities councils “in existence on the date of the enactment of the Arts and Humanities Act of 1985” are eligible to be designated the sole State agency. Such groups might no longer exist.

Section 104(4)(B-C) of the bill revises certain reporting requirements for state humanities agencies, even though there are no such agencies at this time. Currently, state humanities agencies, if any existed, would be required to provide certain data on an annual basis under section 7(f)(2)(A)(viii) (I) and (II) of the Act. This requirement in current law relates to the level of participation by scholars and scholarly organizations and the extent to which programs are available to all people and communities in a given state. The bill changes the reporting requirements for these data from information for the preceding two years to the preceding year, for which the information is available. With this change, information from only the preceding year is necessary. Annual reporting of this type of data is more compatible with existing state information systems.

Section 104(4)(D-E) of the bill makes the same reporting changes to section 7(f)(3)(J) (i) and (ii) of the Act for state humanities councils or committees as was provided for in Section 103(4)(B-C) with respect to state humanities agencies.

Section 104(F) of the bill alters the allocation formula such that the NEH Chairperson would receive 25 percent as opposed to 34 percent of the excess State humanities program funds, 53 percent would be allotted in equal amounts among the States and the 22 percent remaining would be distributed on the basis of population.

Section 104(5) of the bill is amended to delete the date by which the Secretary of Labor was to prescribe standards. The deadline has been met and the deletion does not affect the Secretary's authority to prescribe standards, regulations, and procedures.

Section 104(6) of the bill corrects the name of the National Endowment for the Humanities as misstated in section 7(h)(2)(B).

Section 104(7) of the bill strikes out the requirement in section 7(k) of the Act that a "national information and data collection" system be developed by NEH and inserts a requirement that such a system be employed. This change is being made because the system has already been developed pursuant to the requirements of the 1985 Act. The provision that a plan be submitted to Congress within one year of the effective date of the 1985 Act has been accomplished and, therefore, that provision is being deleted. The foregoing are the same being recommended for NEA in Section 102(4)(A) of the bill. The last sentence of Section 7(k) currently provides that the state of the humanities report was to be submitted by October 1, 1988 and biennially thereafter. The report for 1988 was submitted and a second one will be submitted in accordance with current law by October 1, 1990. The bill would require submission of the next report in 1992, and quadrennially thereafter. Generally, changes in the humanities field do not occur so rapidly as to warrant a full-scale report to the Congress and President every two years. A four-year interval would probably provide more perspective and thus permit a more significant report. Developments that might occur between reports could be brought to the attention of Congress through NEH planning documents, Congressional budget submissions and reports or other appropriate formats.

Section 104(8) of the bill repeals subsection 7(l) of the Act which required that a plan be submitted by NEH to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission by January 31, 1986. Such a report was presented to EEOC by the date indicated, fulfilling the requirements of this subsection. NEH continues to be in compliance with EEOC requirements which no longer include submission of goals and timetables for agencies with less than 500 employees.

In place of the foregoing provision which has been deleted, a new provision has been inserted to require that a group applicant must meet certain statutory tests in order to qualify as a non-profit organization. This new provision is the same as the one found in Section 5(f) of the Act and is being added to be in conformity with NEA's provision.

A new subsection (m) has been added to Section 7 of the Act to provide express authority to the Chairperson, with the advice of the National Council on the Humanities, to make an annual $10,000 award to the Jefferson Lecturer and up to five $5,000 awards to persons selected to be recipients of the Charles Frankel Prize. These awards have been given in the past by NEH with the knowledge and implicit approval of Congress. The NEA has the National Medal of Arts award program which was established in 1983.

Any group receiving a grant from the NEH may award grants (subgrants) to carry out the purposes for which the grant was received.

Section 105

Section 105 of the bill repeals subsection 9(d) of the Act. Section 9(d) required the Federal Council on the Arts and the Humanities to undertake a study pertaining to museums and the Institute of Museum Services. A report based on this study was presented to Congress in February 1988, thereby fulfilling the requirement of this subsection.

The Federal Council is now required to conduct a study of the nature and level of public support for arts at the Federal, State, and local level, to be completed within one year of enactment.

Section 105 of the bill alters the list of members of the Federal Council on the Arts to exclude the commissioner on aging, a member designated by the United States Information Agency, a member designated by the Secretary of the Interior, and the chairman of the Senate Commission on Art and Antiques, and inserting the Director of the USIA, the Director of the National Park Service, and the President Pro Tempore of the Senate.

Section 106

Section 106 of the bill adds a new Section 10 "Arts Education", with the purpose of encouraging and developing quality arts education at all formal grade levels and including informal multi-age level educational programs. It also authorizes the Chairperson of the NEA to pay the Federal share of awarding grants and entering into contracts with schools, groups, and individuals concerned with the arts in education. The Federal share may not exceed 50 percent of the cost. Funds may be used to encourage public knowledge and development of artists through partnerships between local and State arts and education agencies, businesses, colleges, and universities. Funds would assist artists and teachers of the arts in career development; improve evaluation and assessment of arts education programs; support art residencies, technology, and research.

This section also establishes a National Arts Education Advisory Board consisting of 15 members appointed by the Chairperson of the NEA. The board is to be broadly representative of the field of arts education. Two members are to be from the general public who are knowledgeable in arts education, and not less than one who is a parent of a school age child involved in arts education. Members should represent various geographical regions of the U.S.
The Chairperson of the NEA may appoint to the Board no more than 3 members from any State. There should be equitable representation of women, minorities, and persons with disabilities. The basic term of office will be 5 years, with 3 to serve 5 years, 3 for 4 years, 3 for 3 years, 3 for 2 years, and 3 to serve one year. Any member who has been on the Board for 7 consecutive years will be ineligible during the 3 year period following the expiration. The Chairperson of the Board shall be designated by the Chairperson of the NEA from among the appointed members. The Board shall meet not less than four times a year. Eight members constitute a quorum. Board members are allowed travel expenses including per diem. The duties of the Board include coordination of activities to encourage and develop quality arts education in conjunction with elementary, secondary, and postsecondary education; to stimulate research to teach quality arts education; and to encourage other Federal and State agencies in the area of arts education.

Section 107(1) of the bill alters the reference to the U.S. Code from section 529 to section 3324, as per changes in the Code. The bill further amends the unnumbered paragraph following paragraph (8) of section 10(a) of the Act by making it new paragraph (b). The bill further amends said unnumbered paragraph as paragraphs (c) and (d), at the places where mention is made of the selection of panels of experts and their duties. These new subsections were created because they did not relate to the preceding paragraph (8) and dealt with separate subject matters. By virtue of adding these two new subsections, the subsequent subsections (b), (c), and (d) have been redesignated as (e), (f), and (g). Two subsections have been deleted. Subsection (e) required a joint study of arts and humanities education to be conducted by the two Endowments and the Secretary of Education. The study was completed and the report made to the various committees of Congress by the date indicated, thereby fulfilling the requirements of this subsection. Subsection (f) required the two Endowments to submit reports to Congress detailing the procedures used in selecting experts for appointment to panels and the procedures used by the panels in making recommendations for funding applications. Both studies were completed and submitted to Congress.

This section also outlines the Chairperson's functions for both the NEA and NEH as the prescription of regulations; receipt of money and property donated, bequeathed, devised; utilization of experts and consultants; and abiding by civil service laws.

The Chairperson of the NEA is required to ensure that each panel of experts has wide geographic, aesthetic, ethnic, and minority representation by (1) creating an agencywide panelist bank including knowledgeable laypersons and insuring where feasible that they serve on panels, (2) requiring site visits on applicants, (3) requiring that a verbatim record of panel deliberations and recommendations be kept, (4) requiring that the membership of each panel change substantially from year to year, with no appointment to a panel to exceed three years, and (5) requiring all meetings of the National Council on the Arts be open to the public.
The Inspector General of the NEA is required to conduct appropriate reviews to ensure grantee compliance with regulations.

This section also imposes sanctions when NEA funds are used to create, produce or support a project or production which is found to be obscene or to violate child pornography laws in a criminal trial (and all appeals of the conviction are exhausted) in a state in which the project was produced or which was described in the grant application as a site for the project.

Sanctions include repayment of the NEA funds which supported the work found to violate obscenity or child pornography laws. In addition, a defendant or defendants convicted in the trial will be debarred from receiving additional NEA funding for at least three years or until the funds are repaid—whichever is longer. Failure to repay the amount due would result in permanent debarment.

The Chairperson of the NEA shall develop regulations to implement these sanctions.

Section 108

Section 108(1)(A) of the bill provides for a five year authorization of definite program appropriations for NEA, for fiscal years 1991 through 1995. It authorizes $125,800,000 for fiscal year 1991, and such funds as may be necessary for the remaining fiscal years.

Section 108(1)(B) of the bill provides for a five year authorization of definite program appropriations for NEH, for fiscal years 1991 through 1995. It authorizes $119,900,000 for fiscal year 1991, and such sums as may be necessary for the remaining fiscal years.

Section 108(1)(C) of the bill strikes section 11(a)(1)(C) of the Act which provided for a one-time appropriation of funds for fiscal year 1977.

Section 108(1)(D) of the bill extends the authorization of appropriations for NEA's Treasury funds for five years. It authorizes $13,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, and such sums as may be necessary for the remaining fiscal years.

Section 108(1)(E) of the bill extends the authorization of appropriations for NEH's Treasury funds for five years. It authorizes $12,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, and such sums as may be necessary for the remaining years.

Section 108(1)(F) of the bill extends the authorization of appropriations for NEA's Challenge Grant Program for five years, through fiscal year 1995. It authorizes $15,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, and such sums as may be necessary for the remaining fiscal years.

Section 108(1)(G) of the bill extends NEH's authorization of appropriations for Challenge grants for five years, through fiscal year 1995. It authorizes $15,150,000 for fiscal year 1991, and such sums as may be necessary for the remaining fiscal years.

Section 108(1)(H) of the bill deletes the requirement of section 11(a)(3)(C) of the Act that if at the end of the ninth month of any fiscal year Challenge Grant funds cannot be used by one of the Endowments, that Endowment shall transfer the unused funds to the other Endowment. This provision has been in the law since 1976 when the Challenge program was first established for the two Endowments but has never been used. At the inception of this new program, there may have been the concern that Challenge grantees might not be able to meet the 3 to 1 matching requirements which would result in some of the appropriated funds not being used during the fiscal year. However, such a concern has not been borne out. Therefore, deletion of the transfer provision is consistent with the experience of the two Endowments and the independence they have as to all other programs.

Section 108(2)(A) of the bill extends the authorization of appropriations for the administrative funds for the NEA by authorizing $21,200,000 for fiscal year 1991, and such sums as may be necessary for the remaining fiscal years.

Section 108(2)(B) extends the authorization of appropriations for administrative funds for NEH by authorizing $17,950,000 for fiscal year 1991, and such sums as may be necessary for the remaining fiscal years. It also restricts the $35,000 cap on the use of funds for reception and representation expenses only to appropriated funds. Funds reserved by NEH from other sources, such as gifts and bequests would not be subject to the $35,000 limitation. Rising costs relating to events that we propose to make statutory, such as the Jefferson Lecture and the Frankel Prize make this change advisable.

Section 108(3) of the bill amends section 11(d) (1) and (2) of the Act to extend the authorization of appropriations for the two Endowments for five years and authorizes $195,250,000 for the National Endowment for the Arts and $165,000,000 for the National Endowment for the Humanities for fiscal year 1991, and such sums as may be necessary for the remaining fiscal years.

Section 108(4) of the bill authorizes $250,000 for the Federal Council on the Arts' initiatives in fiscal 1991, and such sums thereafter.

This section also provides that, in the event that total appropriations to the NEA exceed $175 million, $10 million is authorized for fiscal 1991 and such sums thereafter for arts education grants.

Title II: Museum Services

Section 201

Section 201(1) of the bill amends section 204(a)(1)(A) of the Act to add "conservation" to the types of resources that are to be represented by the membership of the National Museum Services Board. This addition emphasizes the importance of conservation concerns to IMS programs, the museum community and the general public.

Section 201(2) of the bill changes the annual minimum number of meetings required for the National Museum Services Board from four as stated in section 204(d)(1) of the Act to three. It conforms the authorizing legislation to actual practice, as approved annually by the Congress in appropriations acts.

Section 202

Section 202(1) of the bill removes the restriction on salary level of the IMS Director as prescribed in section 205(a)(1) of the Act. The Director's compensation level is to be provided for in Chapter 53 of title 5 of the U.S. Code by the amendment contained in section 303 of the bill.
Section 202(2) of the bill corrects a drafting error in section 205(a)(2) of the Act, which refers to the "Chairperson" rather than the "Director."

Section 203

Section 203(1) of the bill changes the reference in section 206(a)(5) of the Act to "artifacts and art objects" to "collections," to symbolize the importance of conserving all types of materials in the collections of the various types of museums supported by IMS. Museums eligible for IMS programs include, for example, zoos and botanical gardens, historic houses, and science and technology centers as well as art and other types of museums.

Section 203(2) of the bill eliminates the two restrictions on the funding of projects to strengthen museum services (section 206(b)(1), (2), (3), and (4) of the Act). First, it removes the provisions limiting funding to professional museum organizations. This change would allow IMS to fund other types of organizations which propose worthwhile projects.

Second, it removes the one-year limit on these projects (section 206(b)(2)(A) of the Act). The limit prevents extending the availability of funding in cases where a project is delayed by unexpected circumstances and prevents high quality, beneficial projects from being funded if they cannot be completed in one year. The following provision is renumbered to reflect the deletion.

Section 204

Section 204(1) of the bill extends, for five years, the authorization of appropriations for all IMS programs, as well as the authorization of appropriations to match contributions to IMS (section 209 of the Act). The bill authorizes $24,000,000 for fiscal year 1991, and such sums as may be necessary for the remaining fiscal years.

Title III: Miscellaneous

Section 301

Section 301(1) of the bill amends section 5(b) of the Arts and Artifacts Indemnities Act, referred to as "Act" through section 301 of this section-by-section analysis, by increasing the aggregate level of insurance available for international exhibitions under the Act at any one time to $5,000,000,000. The current statutory limit is $1,200,000,000. This increase is necessary to meet the demand for coverage under the Act and to make the benefits of the Act more widely available. This increase is justified by the continuing escalation in art market values since the current limit was established. The availability of this insurance is key to staging international exhibitions. Since this program was instituted in 1975, there have been only two valid claims totaling $104,000. Based on experience under this Act, it is anticipated that this amendment will have no significant budgetary impact.

Section 301(2) of the bill amends section 5(c) of the Act by increasing the amount of insurance available for a single exhibition to $500,000,000. The current limit is $125,000,000. This increase is necessary to provide adequate coverage of international loans protected by the Act. The higher limit is a realistic accommodation for the effects of the dramatic increase in the value of art objects since the current limit was established. Availability of this insurance is key to staging international exhibitions. Since this program was instituted in 1975 only two certified claims totaling $104,000 have been presented. Based on experience, it is anticipated that this amendment will have no significant budgetary impact.

Section 301(3) of the bill amends section 5(d) of the Act by amending the deductible amounts under indemnity agreements by adding layers of $50,000 (for exhibitions insured at $10 million but less than $125 million), $100,000 (for exhibitions insured at $125 million but less than $300 million), and $200,000 (for exhibitions insured at $300 million or more). The current statutory limits are $15,000, $25,000, and $50,000, depending upon the value of the exhibition. The sliding scale formula used to determine the current limits should be applied to the increase in the per exhibition ceiling. The deductible layers protect the U.S. Treasury from multiple claims for minor losses or damage. This amendment would actually limit the budgetary impacts or claims against the Federal government by increasing the exposure of the exhibition organizer who would be responsible for arranging for additional insurance to cover the deductible amount.

Section 302

Section 302 of the bill repeals Title IV of the Arts, Humanities, and Museums Amendments of 1985 which directed the Comptroller General to conduct a study to determine the feasibility of establishing a revolving fund comprised of payments made to the Federal government for right to use artistic and other works in the public domain with the funds to be used to supplement funding of the agencies under this Act. Work on the project was terminated after the Comptroller General's office consulted with members of Congress and determined that the study should not be pursued.

Section 303

Section 303 of the bill amends 5 U.S.C. 5315 to add the Director of the Institute of Museum Services to level IV of the Executive Schedule for compensation purposes. Section 202(1) of the bill removes the level V provision which was included on the enabling legislation. The Director's compensation level was set at level V when the agency's budget was $3 million and the Director reported to the Director of Health, Education, and Welfare. The budget and degree of responsibility have increased substantially in the last fourteen years. The budget is now $23 million and the Director reports to the President. The level IV more appropriately reflects the Director's responsibilities and role as advocate for the Nation's museums.

Section 304

Section 304 of the bill authorizes a series of regional celebrations through which Americans will see the interaction of art and democracy. These celebrations are to be multi-cultural to pay tribute to the diversity and creativity of the American artistic genius. $10 million for FY 1991 and each year thereafter is authorized for this program.
Section 305

Section 305 of the bill creates within the Design Arts Program of the NEA a “Landscape Design and Assessment” category to provide matching grants to assist States, local government, and private groups in identifying and preparing comprehensive plans to reorganize and to encourage the wise and appropriate future use of significant American landscapes.

XII. Regulatory Impact Statement

In accordance with paragraph 5(a) of rule XXIX of the Standing Rules of the Senate concerning the regulatory impact of the proposed legislation, the Committee has determined that there will be minimal increases in the regulatory burden imposed by the enactment of S. 2724.
ADDITIONAL AND MINORITY VIEWS

ADDITIONAL VIEWS OF MR. THURMOND

I believe the establishment of guidelines for the voluntary acceptance of public funds, by duly elected representatives of the people of our Country, is neither censorship nor a violation of Constitutionally guaranteed freedoms. In my opinion, it is part of our responsibility, as elected officials, to ensure that limited Federal funds are used appropriately. Until we address this matter head-on, I believe we will continue to see more and more discussion of the highly public, and sometimes controversial, matter of Federal funding of the National Endowment for the Arts.

I voted in favor of S. 2724, the NEA reauthorization legislation, as reported by the Committee because it does take positive steps to strengthen NEA accountability. However, I continue to have concerns with regard to grants given out by the National Endowment for the Arts. Last year, I supported provisions in the Interior Appropriations’ bill which placed restrictions on the NEA’s grant-making procedures.

I also supported an amendment offered at mark-up on September 12, 1990 by Senator Coats of Indiana. That amendment would have helped ensure that taxpayer dollars do not fund obscenity or pornographic art work. It also protected against funding materials which have the “purpose or effect of attacking primary historically religious tenets, traditions, symbols or figures.” I believe these proposed provisions could serve as a reasonable check on the actions of the NEA, while also allowing funding for appropriate projects to continue. Though the amendment was defeated, I believe it is squarely responsive to the people and represents a reasonable approach to this delicate matter.

STROM THURMOND.
MINORITY VIEWS OF MR. COATS

I approach the public debate over the reauthorization of the National Endowment for the Arts as a supporter of its central mission. The highest callings of culture are not just Power, or Commerce, but Beauty as well. The Arts humanize the common day, providing enjoyment and refining insight.

The NEA has given aid to many important institutions in my state of Indiana, including the Fort Wayne Philharmonic, the Indiana Historical Society and the Indianapolis Art Museum. I have been pleased to support federal funding for such worthwhile projects which make a significant and important contribution to the cultural life of the Nation.

I believe the National Endowment for the Arts, like the National Endowment for the Humanities and the Institute of Museum Services, can and should play an important role in promoting an appreciation and understanding of the Arts in American life. So I am pleased that S. 2724, as amended, broadens panel membership to include knowledgeable members of the public, expands participation in the review process and strengthens the Endowment's role in arts education.

All this is welcome and needed. But the substitute offered by Senators Pell, Hatch et al. fails at one vital point. And that failure threatens to engulf the NEA in continued controversy and further erode the public support it enjoys.

The issue before the Congress is not the First Amendment rights of artists or the constitutionality of government censorship, but whether taxpayer money should be spent on projects which may be obscene, may promote child pornography or attack the religious beliefs of a majority of the American public. The Pell-Hatch substitute fails to adequately address this issue, in my opinion.

I have been, and remain, a friend of the Endowment. But this is precisely the reason I have been stung by the destructive abuse of their public trust by a small, unaccountable artistic elite.

I have been deeply offended by exhibitions and performances, supported with public funds, that have showcased bizarre perversions, highlighted the sexual exploitation of children and set out to purposely defile sacred religious symbols. I share the outrage felt by the vast majority of my constituents when they see their taxes spent to violate their most deeply held moral and religious convictions.

These have been, admittedly, a small percentage of grants by the NEA. But this is not an issue of economics. Americans are offended because they were intended to be offended. Their wounds were salted by contempt and blasphemy. The limited number of instances simply means the problem should be more easily solved.

Yet the Pell-Hatch substitute, though well intentioned, does not reach to the root of this difficulty. Since it provides no guidelines to the NEA before an offensive work is displayed, its restrictions come too late. The damage is done. The Pell-Hatch substitute will allow a repetition of the funding scandals which have inflamed the public and jeopardized the Endowment. And with each new obscene, pornographic or blasphemous display, it will be more difficult to justify art funding while families, children and the elderly have more immediate needs.

The Congress, I believe, should go beyond the Pell-Hatch substitute to fashion a reasonable, workable remedy that will prevent us from being embroiled in divisive debates over the future of the NEA—even its existence. And that is exactly what I have attempted to do with my amendment to S. 2724.

Unlike the Pell-Hatch substitute which seeks restrictions after the fact, my amendment would provide guidelines to the NEA before a work is displayed. The reasonable standards I have proposed would then allow the NEA to make more thoughtful and sensitive decisions on how tax money will be spent.

I do not propose to cut off, or cut back, funding for the NEA. I am also not suggesting that funding responsibilities be turned over to the States, as some have proposed. But I am saying that the Congress should provide standards for the NEA to follow in its grant-making process, so that it will avoid awarding funds for works that are obscene, pornographic, or offensive to religion. By providing such guidelines, I do not propose that the Congress act, or compel the NEA to act, as censors. But I am convinced that since the NEA has been entrusted with taxpayer dollars, the public should demand, and the Congress should reasonably expect, that the agency will meet certain standards of responsibility in spending those funds. In fact, I do not know of a single federal grant program that does not have preconditions as to how its money is to be spent.

The Coats amendment would provide three guidelines for the NEA in awarding grants, the finding of any of which would be a legitimate basis for the denial of assistance:

First, that the average person, applying contemporary community standards, would find that the materials, taken as a whole, appeal to prurient sexual interest; the materials depict or describe, in a patently offensive way, sexual conduct, as specifically defined by applicable State law; and the materials, taken as a whole, lack serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value. This is the current legal standard of obscenity, as defined by the Supreme Court in Miller v. California.

Second, that the materials involve the sexual exploitation of minors, or employ, use, entice, or coerce any minor to engage in sexually explicit conduct for the purpose of producing any visual depiction of the conduct. This language is based on the federal statutory prohibition against child pornography (see U.S.C. 18, Sec. 2251).

Third, that the materials have the purpose or effect of attacking primary historically religious traditions, tenets, symbols, or figures. There is no statute or case law on blasphemy which defines the limits of federal support for works that denigrate religious beliefs, tenets or the objects of a particular religion. But I believe it is clear that the Federal government should not provide funding for activities that either promotes the establishment of religion or deliberately attacks religion. We cannot ignore the fact that the NEA has funded a number of controversial projects that have offended people of diverse religious convictions and have deliberately attacked religious traditions, tenets, symbols or figures.

Obviously the NEA, in applying the proposed guidelines, will have to consider a number of factors in deciding whether the grant proposal it reviews will meet the criteria set forth in the Coats amendment. The agency may have to consider where the work is to be created, where it is to be shown or performed, the grantee's history and prior works, the project's purpose and description, and so forth. NEA counsel may have to consult with state and local lawyers to determine local obscenity standards. The panel may even have to use some common sense in deciding what should be funded and what should not. But that should be part of the review process that the Pell-Hatch substitute seeks to reform.

My goal is simple. The Congress should require that the Endowment apply some standards when it decides how it will use public funds. My amendment would provide reasonable guidelines before those funds are used, not after the damage has been done. It makes no sense to propose, as the Pell-Hatch substitute does, that the taxpayers, to obtain satisfaction, should have to rely on someone to incur the expense of hiring an attorney and filing a lawsuit—then waiting on a final court determination that the work is obscene or pornographic. What happens during lengthy appeals? Can the grantee apply for additional funds? There is apparently nothing in the Pell-Hatch substitute to prevent the NEA from awarding more grants to the same artist to produce other objectionable works.

It has been argued that the restrictions I've outlined would violate the First Amendment rights of artists and set up the Congress as a censor. But that contention, with due respect, is simply false to the facts.

The Congress has no role as art critic. And it certainly has no role as censor. But it does have, as its primary and defining purpose, the role of determining if public funds are spent in the public interest. That is the substance of this debate—not the meaning of art or the limits of censorship, but the distribution of public funds. As an article in the Washington Post put it, "Americans make distinctions between what they will tolerate and what they will subsidize."

Opponents talk of artistic freedom. But this amendment doesn't tell anyone what to do, just whose money they can use. The issue here is not artistic freedom. It is the use of public funds. And I can muster little patience for those who imagine that artistic freedom is identical to feeding at the public trough.

I do not deny any artist the right to create anything he wants to create on his own. I do contend that the Congress has both the right and the responsibility to set conditions and minimum standards for the use of public funds. Unfortunately the NEA has shown an unwillingness or an inability to decide appropriate uses for those funds on numerous occasions.

To call the standards I have proposed oppressive, I believe is to betray extremism. For they are simply a timid minimum—the barest of common sense restrictions.
In the conflict over the NEA we are debating whether taxpayers can be compelled to give money then used to defile the moral and religious beliefs by which they order their lives. We are debating whether public funds can be taken from men and women and then used to vandalize their values.

I believe the answer should and must be "no."

Congress, by the demands of an angry public and according to the demands of our own convictions, must put an end to federal funding for these works of deformed imagination and calloused conscience. The Pell-Hatch substitute will not do the job. As Senator Thurmond observed, the cause of federal support for the arts will not be advanced by continuing down this path.

In the absence of some standard—in the absence of responsible rules and accountability—the Endowment itself will be called into question. And we will have thrown away lightly an institution worth defending.

Dan Coats.
