"URI SAFE ZONE" CAMPAIGN

The "URI Safe Zone" symbol shown below is meant to convey a message to lesbians, gays, and bisexuals (as well as the larger campus community) at the University of Rhode Island. The intended message is that the person displaying this symbol is one who will be non-judgmental, understanding, and trustworthy should anyone need help, advice, or just someone with whom to talk. In a campus environment that may often seem like a desert of hatred and intolerance, this symbol will demarcate an oasis of understanding and support. Anyone seeing this symbol will know that, whatever the attitude toward gays, lesbians, and bisexuals may be elsewhere on campus, here at least is a "Safe Zone."

Anyone who sincerely wishes to participate in this campaign and genuinely commits to embodying the symbol's meaning can obtain one from the Affirmative Action Office, the Office of Student Life, or Police Headquarters. Please display the symbol at your own office, room, or other appropriate space to announce your creation of another "URI Safe Zone."

The symbol is a green circle surrounding two triangles, one pink and one black, and bears the words "URI SAFE ZONE." The pink triangle was used by the Nazis to label gay men and the black triangle was used to label lesbians (and others deemed antisocial). These symbols have been adopted as a symbol of gay and lesbian identity and self-esteem. The green circle, the opposite of the familiar red circle with a slash, signifies that it is okay for these issues to be discussed in the area where the symbol is displayed.

"The University of Rhode Island prohibits discrimination on the basis of race, sex, religion, age, color, creed, national origin, handicap, or sexual orientation (emphasis added) in the recruitment, admission, access to, or treatment of students, the recruitment, hiring, or treatment of faculty, and staff, and the operation of its activities and programs..."
