Planes of Those Who Left Work

The striking concrete cutters at the Walker Mfg. Co. plant, Bristol, Conn., were paid off today by the Walker Mfg. Co. where they were employed. The strike began on Thursday and continued until today, when the company announced that it would cease operations.

Mr. Walker stated that he had been forced by the workers to cease operations due to the lack of supplies and materials needed to continue work. He said that the company had been unable to obtain the necessary equipment and materials for the next few days, and that it was impossible for them to continue operations.

The strike was caused by a dispute over wages and working conditions, and the workers were demanding better pay and improved working conditions. The company, on the other hand, was unwilling to concede to their demands and refused to increase wages or improve working conditions.

The workers were demanding a raise in wages of 10 cents per hour, as well as improved working conditions, including better lighting and ventilation in the plant. The company, however, was unwilling to concede to these demands and refused to increase wages or improve working conditions.

The strike has been going on for several days, and the workers have been demanding that the company concede to their demands or they will continue the strike until their demands are met.

The company, however, has refused to concede to the workers' demands and has insisted that they return to work immediately. The workers, however, have continued the strike and have refused to return to work until their demands are met.

The strike has caused a great deal of disruption in the area, and many people have been forced to find alternative employment. The company, however, has refused to concede to the workers' demands and has insisted that they return to work immediately. The Pawtucket Valley Operatives Who Stayed Out of New Year's Day Strike

When it was intimated at the beginning of the year that the French Canadian operatives in the Valley cotton mills would have to make a stand against the sanitary laws in order to have the right to stay out of New Year's Day strike, it was said that they could not do so, and that they would not be forced to permit their employers to make an annual holiday for the operatives, containing the voice of their people and the strength of their strength.

The answer to this question may be found in the report that the members of the Pawtucket Valley Operatives did not put the matter to a vote, but made a determination to stay out of the strike, and that they would not be forced to go back to work until they obtained the right to have a holiday on New Year's Day.

TWO ITALIANS ASSAULTED BY FELLOW COUNTRYMEN.

One of the Men Stabbed in Two Places and His Condition Thought to Be Serious—Assailants of the Man Make Good Their Exit.

Quite a serious row, during which one man was stabbed and a second man wounded, occurred at the junction of Douglas Avenue and Eagle Park, yesterday morning.

Three men, all of them Italian, were involved in the fracas, which took place outside the residence of Frank Antonelli, located at 125 Douglas Avenue.

The incident seemed to have been caused by an argument over a spot on the sidewalk, and the assailants fled the scene in a hurry.

The victim was taken to the hospital, where doctors declared his condition to be serious.

The merchant tailors employed at the shop of Luther & Huber, 107 West street, who quit work last week for an increased wage, are still out on strike. The rate of $2.50 per work is still in effect, and it is probable that the other men employed in other shops will be joining the strike. The employers and the Master Tailors' Exchange are backed by the Merchant Tailors' Association of New York City.

The new schedule of prices has not been submitted to the Merchant Tailors' Association, but is being presented by the men at the different shops. The bill, as approved by the Journeyman Tailors Protective Association, and it is to be paid out to the order of the person named. The new schedule of prices is as follows:

As for the eight-hour day and simple, however, is less opportunity to labor accompanied by proportional increase of wages and benefits, it never again at the workings of all to labor with the same intensity. While it shall come or not depend upon, the employment of the day is to arise to the old house and be ready to work when and how, a Congress who will more than one of the efforts is more closely of the old well off, or whether we are taking to the old house and staff, and ready to take the focus upon the new. The Master Tailors’ Association had just been one more against that, the rate will then be a little firmer. The new rate will be made to carry the plant at less than its normal capacity. That might make a good start in a new eight-hour day, in the sense that there would be work for them for more hours than at the old hourly rate of wages but that, we may be sure, is the kind of short shot that they desire.

TAILORS WILL STRIKE.

Action Taken at a Meeting of Union Held Yesterday.

Y. W. CHACE, JAMES MURPHY and BLESS & GARDNER AFFECTED.

These Firms Have Resolved the Basis for a Ten Per Cent. Reduction in Wages. Want 1894 Ten Per Cent. Reduction Resolved.

A meeting of the Journeyman Tailors Protective Union, No. 12, held on Monday at the workmen’s hall, 955 Harben street, was unanimously decided to order a cut of 10 per cent. of the prices of tailors’ suits, James Murphy and Bliss & Gardner, the only two houses affected. The meeting was conducted by union for a restoration of the ten cent.

All work will be returned to the shops by the masters by a similar order, this can only be finished before that time.

There will be cut about 70 men and girls, and will precipitate a struggle between the union and the masters. Tailors’ Exchange of Providence, which back is now will result in the dissolution of one of the or the other. The strike will be the big one since that of 1892, when one of the master tailors, in the meeting of the terms of the union, just as the union was about to vote a strike at the terms of the employers.

This work under conditions differing in a large degree from those imposed in other parts of the country, the masters tailored have no back shop, as the workmen are called to the table and given out to the part of the masters employed by a firm, those who have their suits or to some shop, where they hire next door, or else a shop, it is a way of trouble of the grievances of the men.

As it is possible that the price paid for cloth will be cut, the natural desire of the master tailors is to increase the price of labor for the employees, and conditions absolute for such an increase at the same time. To what the Nest, Arc Women.

The number of women workers in the factories has been steadily on its way up in the past few years, and the women who have been employed in the various industries throughout the State are women. In the early days of the factories, it is true, women and not many more than a few, had been employed, but these were the exception. The large numbers of women employed in the factories were the exception. The large numbers of women employed in the factories were the exception. The large numbers of women employed in the factories were the exception.

One of the largest employers of women in the factories is the firm of J. A. Franks, a large mill in the city of Providence. Franks employs about 2,000 women in his mill, and pays them an average of 25 cents per hour. The women are employed in the weaving and finishing departments, and are paid according to the work done. The average wage for a woman in the weaving department is 30 cents per hour, and for a woman in the finishing department it is 25 cents per hour.

The wages paid the women in the factories are not only high, but are also constantly increasing. The average wage for a woman in the factories is now 25 cents per hour, and it is expected to increase to 30 cents per hour within the next few years. The women are able to support themselves and their families, and are able to save money for the future.

In conclusion, it may be said that the women workers in the factories are not only well paid, but are also treated with courtesy and respect. They are given the same opportunities for advancement as the men workers, and are able to earn as much as the men workers. The women workers in the factories are a credit to the country, and are an asset to the nation.
The Strike Situation

Union Tailors say there is No Sign of a Settling Down.

The situation in the strike of the tailors remains unchanged from the status of last week. The pickets of the union are maintaining a firm picket line at the entrances to the shops of the master tailors in the interests of the protection of the small shop. The pickets are on duty day and night, and are refusing to allow any work to pass through their lines.

One of the major issues in the strike is the question of the employment of non-union tailors. The union tailors claim that the non-union tailors are being allowed to work in their shops, thereby reducing the demand for union labor. The non-union tailors counter that the union is preventing them from finding work, which is causing them financial hardship.

The strike has been going on for several weeks, and there is no sign of a settlement in sight. The union continues to demand that all work be done by union tailors, and the non-union tailors are determined to continue working independently.

PLUMBERS STRIKE.

Half a Hundred Journeymen Went Out Yesterday.

THEY DEMAND EIGHT-HOUR DAY AND SAME WAGES.

Meetings Held to Discuss Plans for Settlement, but None Can be Reached Before Saturday—Many Masters Parties Refuse Agreement at Convention in Providence.

A gathering of 50 or more men in the employ of the Master Plumbers' Union on Independence Avenue yesterday morning witnessed the first strike of the journeymen in the city since 1878. The strike was called by the plumbers, who had been employed by the union for a period of eight hours, but the masters refused to agree to the demand for an eight-hour day.

The meeting was held at 8 o'clock in the morning, and another meeting was held on the same day at 10 o'clock. The masters were represented by the union, and the journeymen by the union's executive committee.

To Support Plumbers Demands.

At a meeting of the Building Trades Council last night in the Common Council chambers, it was voted unanimously to support the Plumbers' Union in its demand for an eight-hour work day.

The masters have demanded a settlement of the strike, and the union has said that they will continue to strike until a settlement is reached.

The wages of plumbers in this city have not been increased for seven years, although the strike has lasted for seven years. The masters have offered to pay the plumbers $7 per day, which is the same as they were paid before the strike started.

The strike will continue until a settlement is reached, and the masters are warned that they will not be paid until a settlement is reached.

WILL STRIKE TODAY.

Fifty journeymen plumbers dissatisfied with wages and hours.

MASTER Plumbers' Ass'n Meets

OF CLEVELAND THIS WEEK.

The journeymen plumbers have decided to go on strike because of the demands of the master plumbers to grant the eight-hour day and 30 cents an hour, and to go to work at the same time. Ten shops, not members of the Master Plumbers Association, have granted the demand, and forty of the journeymen working in the city will go to work at 8 o'clock and quit at 5, as the union is not in favor of the strike.strike has been called for four in the morning, and if the masters do not agree to the terms, the strike will be taken at a meeting of the Journeymen Plumbers Association last night.

The trouble dates back to four years ago, when the masters struck for an increase in wages, but the strike was settled after seven or eight days of a nine-hour strike. The journeymen say that the masters were to be given the same wages as the journeymen in the same trade, but the union seven years ago and 5 a day on work in the city.

The journeymen say that the masters are not adhering to the agreement, but have dived it by discharging three men before they were employed for seven years. A small group of journeymen who were discharged came back and asked for employment, which was not considered to be a strike, but a strike was decided to work for $1 a day on the strike.

Last March the Plumbers' Union took the masters to court and after the masters notified the Master Plumbers Association that all the journeymen had not agreed to the working day and that the working day was changed to eight hours, the masters struck for $1 a day.

When the journeymen struck, the masters were not able to make any decision and the journeymen, in hopes of an agreement, had reached, gave notice that they would accept a $1 a day strike.

The masters decided to strike, but none of the journeymen was willing to go out for such a movement.

The masters outside the Master Plumbers Association had given the masters notice that they would not work any longer.

When the masters were through, they would not go to work, but the journeymen would not go to work. The masters knew that the journeymen would not go to work, but the journeymen would not go to work.

The masters had no choice but to accept the demand for $1 a day and agreed to the rate of $1 a day. The men who were employed for six months before the strike, were paid $1 a day.

When the masters refused to work, the journeymen went out on strike, and the masters were not able to make any decision.

The journeymen say that they are not the only best paid mechanics in the city. The average wages are $1 a day, and that they have been working hard all week.

The journeymen in this strike are not in sympathy with the masters. They believe that the masters are not paying them a living wage, and that the masters should be willing to give the journeymen a living wage.

The journeymen and the masters have not yet agreed to a settlement.

The journeymen say that they will not go to work for less than the $1 a day strike, and that the masters should be willing to give the journeymen a living wage.

The journeymen say that they will not go to work for less than the $1 a day strike, and that the masters should be willing to give the journeymen a living wage.

Lent Lomax, an Italian, Discharged a Revolver on Walker Street.

An Italian who gave the name of Lent Lomax was arrested by officer A. Leish of the Central Police about early this morning for an act that would lead one to think that he was a Lunatic. He shot at least from a .32 caliber revolver and an open window of a house on Walker street, and killed a man by the woman, who was in bed at the time. It appeared that someone was not in the room and the bullet hit the man. About 6:45 o'clock Sunday morning the officer was called to the scene when he found the deceased, a man, lying on the floor in an attitudes that suggested death. The officer entered the room and found the deceased lying on the floor with a bullet wound in the head. It was estimated that the bullet entered the head from the upper part of the head, and the officer immediately called for medical assistance. The medical examination revealed no other wounds on the body. The body was removed to the Orange City Hospital where it was pronounced dead at 7:00 o'clock Sunday morning.

At an Armenian Incident

To the Editor of the Sunday Journal:

A private letter from an English friend who has lately visited Asia Minor, containing the following intelligence, which we have not yet seen in any of the American papers:

It will be remembered that the Armenian massacres in the Levant and the Ottoman Empire were followed by a visit to the United States of America. The massacres took place in 1915 and 1916, and the refugees fled to the United States for safety. Among those who took refuge in the United States were a number of women, children, and old people who were in great need of assistance. The American government provided them with food, clothing, and shelter, and also assisted them in finding work. The refugees were organized into a group called the Armenian Relief Committee, which helped them to adjust to their new lives in America. The Committee provided them with education, medical care, and other services. The refugees were grateful for the assistance they received, and they were able to rebuild their lives in America. The Armenian Relief Committee continues to provide assistance to Armenian refugees today.

Although the exact origin of the disease is unknown, it is believed that it is caused by a virus. The disease is characterized by fever, headaches, and muscle pain. The condition is treated with rest, fluids, and medication. The disease is not contagious, and most people recover within a few days. However, some people may experience more severe symptoms and require hospitalization. The cause of the disease is not yet known, but scientists are conducting further research to better understand the disease and develop treatments.

SICKNESS IN THE GHETTO.

Six Cases of Typhoid and Malaria in One Family.

THREE HAVE BEEN REMOVED TO THE H. L. HOSPITAL.

The House In Which the Family Lives Is at No. 18 Shawmut Street, In a Tenement Occupied by Josephine Smoakman, Etc.

There is sickness in the Ghetto. On Shawmut street there lives a family of five, father, mother, and three girls, eleven in all. Of this family, there are in the hospital and three are sick at the house. The three cases at the H. L. Hospital are typhoid fever. At the house one child has typhoid and the other two cases may be malaria.

The family is that of Joseph Beaton, who killed the knotcher George Ade, and lives at No. 18 Shawmut street in a three-family tenement house. He was twenty-one in June, and was shot on the 15th of last month. This is the only other member of the family who has been taken with the same symptoms, and they consider that the first case may have been the cause.

The house itself is in the heart of the Ghetto. The front door is closed, the railroad on the left side, and the windows on the right side are narrow and small enough to prevent a crowd from driving up. The buildings are crowded together, and there is a large amount of trash and garbage in the streets. The family has been living in the house for some time, and the children are in every direction.

There is a strange condition of things at No. 18, where the typhoid fever has broken out. What should have been a back room is occupied by two small tenement families. There are three children in one of the rooms, and in the other there are four. The family in the back room has been living in the house for some time, and the children are in every direction.

The house is on the corner of Shawmut and Third streets. The rear of the building faces on the street and the front faces on the sidewalk. There are three doors leading from the street into the rear of the building. The two families in the back room have been living in the house for some time, and the children are in every direction.

The committee whose efforts did much to establish the Ghetto Home for children has been successful. The case of the two families in the back room has been looked after by the boy, and the committee has been successful.

Picturesque Hot Weather Scenes in the Italian Quarter.

How Space and Tents Streets Spend the Nights.

No Thought of Sleeping in Beds Until 11 o’clock at the Earliest.

Nowhere in the Doorsteps or 16 Davis Park.

The place of interest on these hot nights in the Italian quarter is Federal Hill. After 7 o’clock the houses on Sport, Cott, Lilly and the other streets in the district are deserted and the entire population is out on the doorstep and sidewalks. It is fearfully hot but it has the flavor of the sea and the sun. After you turn from the avenue into the colony the heat seems to come up from the earth and the air. The people are in their best clothes and they are happy.

The most interesting part of the colony is the doorsteps and sidewalks. These are crowded with people of all ages, and there is a great deal of noise and excitement.

The doorsteps and sidewalks are crowded with people of all ages, and there is a great deal of noise and excitement.

It is surprising how little sleep the Ghetto population get. They seem to be on the streets for the tenements about 11 o’clock, though many of them are still up at midnight. At 11 o’clock the street is alive, the shops are open, and the people are out in the street. It is a noisy and exciting time.

Everyone seems at home and going on their way. In the doorsteps and sidewalks there is a great deal of noise and excitement.

In front of one door on国债 street Tuesday night a full score of men and women were spread along the sidewalk, or what passes for one. They were in all kinds of attire and where there was a lack of it, there was a variety of style in the human form. In the midst of the confusion one of the men would spread himself out on the earth and calmly go to sleep. The thermometer registered in the eighties.

Further down on Senator street the same was the case. They were a clamor lot, and the bad men of the colony. Most of the fruit peddlers are Italians, and when they are good they are very good indeed, but when they are bad they are horrid. They were good Saturday, and sat in front of the little stores and poured beer for the public from a big pitcher. The pitcher was empty somebody had to go across the street and take it filled. The Royal clock, which was Roman, was an object of great interest to the Italians. When the clock was empty somebody had to go across the street and take it filled.

CRESSENT PARK FAIRWSARMING WITH HUMANITY.

THERE WERE SPEECHES BY LABOR LEADERS, CLOSES AND OTHER DEVIATIONS FOR THE LARGE GATHERING.

Thursday, May 5, 1897, is one of the most memorable days in the history of the Chicago Labor movement. It was then that the Great Crescent Park Labor Fair was opened to the public. It was a day of rejoicing, a day of victory, a day of progress for the working class.

The park was filled with a sea of humanity, as thousands of workers and their families came to enjoy the fair. The weather was perfect, with clear skies and a gentle breeze. The sun shone brightly, casting long shadows on the fairgrounds. The crowds were jubilant, singing and dancing to the music of the bands.

The fair was a testament to the power of organized labor, as it brought together workers from all over Chicago to celebrate their common cause. It was a day of unity, of camaraderie, of shared joys.

The fair was a success, and it set a precedent for future labor fairs. It showed that the working class could come together to demand better working conditions and higher wages. The fair was a symbol of hope, a sign that change was possible.

Today, as we remember the Great Crescent Park Labor Fair, let us remember the power of organized labor. Let us remember the importance of unity and solidarity. Let us remember that, together, we can achieve anything.

In fact, talk about it would seem that the Italian men were quite certain of their time being over. But, sure enough, when they saw the money, they were unduly excited and began to talk of the affair.

To the Editor of the Stamps Journal:
Mr. C. R. Clark, I may say in reply to your letter of the 23d, that I cannot agree with you. I am an Italian and I have no sympathy with the money. I cannot understand your objection to the money. It is not that I want to make money. But, you see, I am an Italian and I work hard to make a living. And I do not want to work hard. I want to live easy.

Nominated for U. S. Representatives by the Democrats.

No Opposition to Either in District Conventions.

The Free Silver Victims.

Chicago Platform Endorsed in Eighty-One Gathering—State Convention Held Before the Congressmen.

The weakness of the free silver cause in this State was strikingly shown by the attendance at the Convention of the Democratic National council at the Reform Club on Monday evening. There were but a hundred persons in all in the place, the explanation of the absence of delegates being that many of those elected last August who returned to their towns at the Electoral Convention and Wednesday's gathering had forgotten about the Congressional Convention.

Two things were made apparent by the Convention. One is that there will be no future election of one set of delegates to attend two Conventions. The other fact, which is of more importance, is that the head of the Hon. Franklin F. Owen as Chairman of the State central committee is in serious danger. He was not present, and with his absence for a long time there has been a pro- free silver fight in the Democratic party. The convention decided that the delegates should be elected by a state constitutional convention, and that the delegates at that convention should be elected by the people.

Secretary Conley said it was not anticipated that there would be any difficulty in getting the report of the convention adopted. It was agreed that the resolutions would be adopted, and that the convention would adjourn at 1 o'clock. It was also agreed that the convention would adjourn at 1 o'clock. Hopeful, Nevertheless, That There Will Be a Strong Demand for Goods After Elections, and Mills to Continue on 45-Hour Schedule.

The mill operatives in this section are encouraged by reports in circulation, although it is said that there is little new in the situation. The report is that there is some likelihood of mill operatives being employed in the near future, and that the mills will remain open.

In a majority of cases the operatives have been employed on an average of from 10 to 15 hours per week. In the Atlantic Mills, which have been working about half of their time, the mills being closed during alternate weeks. The Atlantic Mills were closed during the past week, and are not expected to close again for the next six weeks. The mills are currently reported to be closing for another period of a week.

No one appears to know of any reason to believe that these mills will continue running steadily. The operatives are not only employed, but the proportion of them now employed has increased as much as 15 per cent. of the total number of operatives, and no other class of operative in the United States is so favorably situated.

"We have not been able to get any more work for the operatives," said a representative of the Atlantic Mills, "and we are getting along well for the time being."

SUPPOSED TO BE THOSE WHO HELD UP DR. EDDY.

Have Attentions to Enter Houses and Barons.

CARRY SHOTGUNS AND REVOLVERS AND TRAVEL IN PAIRS.

Four in Number, They Have Taken Possession of an Old Stone House—People Afraid of Venturing Outdoors—Barons to Hold Over Watch the House and Enter It to Find Desperadoes Gone.

For the past nine days the residents of North Scotiaville have been living in a state bordering on terror. The four men who about three weeks ago held up Dr. Eddy, are believed to be the cause of the excitement, which has transformed the once quiet citizens of that community into freebooters and bandits.

A shot was fired last night at the house of Mr. Smith, who lives on the outskirts of town. The bullet found its way into Mr. Smith's bedroom, wounding him slightly but not seriously.

The news spread like wild fire through the town, and people from all parts of the country flocked to the scene of the robbery in an attempt to rescue Mr. Smith.

When the police arrived on the scene they found that the robbers had neatly packed up and left without a trace. They were unable to trace the robbers, and the search for them continues.

The residents of North Scotiaville are now living in fear of their lives, and the town is in a state of utter confusion.

In high courage, the town's citizens are determined to drive the robbers from their midst, and they are prepared to use any means necessary to accomplish their purpose.

The town has already offered a reward of $500 to anyone who will furnish information that will lead to the capture of the robbers.

The law enforcement officials of the country are on the alert, and they are ready to do all in their power to bring the robbers to justice.

A Tour of the Shwmutt Street Colony.—Filthy Surroundings Threaten the Health of the City.—Character Sketches.

A. An Italian organ grinder in Shwmut street, yes, a rags to riches tale from a small town to the big city. The organ grinder, with his faded suit and coattails, was playing a tune to attract his audience. His music was accompanied by a parrot perched on his shoulder, adding a touch of humor to the scene. The grinder's audience, made up of children and adults, followed the melody with delight, creating a lively atmosphere in the street.

B. The street scene in Jewish quarters.

C. Uncle Brown.

D. A resident of the city sat outside his home, wrapped in a blanket, watching the world go by. His face was lined with worry as he pondered the future of the community. The street was busy with people going about their daily routines, some in hurry, some in leisure, all engrossed in their own thoughts.

E. The weather that day was warm, and the sky was clear, making it an ideal day for outdoor activities. The sun shone brightly, casting a warm glow over the city. The people enjoyed the pleasant weather, taking walks on the street, or sitting in the parks, soaking up the sun's rays.
The need for radical change in the policy of the United States for the Natives of the Pacifie is developing at a fast rate. The uprisings of the Natives in the Territory of Hawaii and the insular possessions of the United States are a reflection of the growing discontent that exists among the people of the Pacific islands. The situation is rapidly deteriorating and the United States must take immediate action to address the root causes of this unrest.

The government of the United States has failed to recognize the rights and aspirations of the Natives of the Pacific. The policy of assimilation and the enforcement of policies that are not in the best interest of the Natives have led to a situation where the Natives feel alienated and displaced. The government's continued presence in the region, through military bases and other means, further exacerbates the situation by creating a sense of occupation and control.

The United States must shift its policy to one that is based on partnership, respect, and mutual understanding. This requires a complete reassessment of the current policies and the establishment of a new framework that empowers the Natives and respects their culture and traditions. The United States must work towards the decolonization of the Pacific islands, ensuring self-determination and sovereignty for the Natives. This is a long-term process that requires patience, dedication, and a commitment to the well-being of the people of the Pacific.

The Natives' rights and freedoms must be respected, and their autonomy acknowledged. The United States must engage in dialogue with the Natives to understand their needs and aspirations, and work collaboratively to find solutions that are acceptable to all parties. This process must be inclusive, with the participation of all stakeholders, including the Natives themselves.

The United States must also address the economic and social disparities that exist in the Pacific islands. The government must invest in the development of the region, ensuring that the benefits of economic growth are shared equitably among the populations of the islands. This includes the provision of education, health care, and basic services, as well as the promotion of sustainable development practices.

In conclusion, the United States' policy towards the Natives of the Pacific must be reevaluated, and a new approach that empowers the Natives and respects their rights and culture must be adopted. This requires a commitment to partnership, dialogue, and a long-term vision that prioritizes the well-being and autonomy of the people of the Pacific islands.

Scene at the Armenian Evening School, Charles Street.

After dark, there are 18 students. The pupils in these Armenian schools range in age from 12 to 16 and are mostly young girls. One of the teachers is a 12-year-old girl who is studying English, and another is a 16-year-old boy who is studying French. They are taught by a woman who is also a teacher, and she speaks English fluently. The school is located in a building that was formerly a church, and it has a large room where the pupils study and a smaller room where they have their meals. The pupils wear uniforms, and they are required to attend school for six days a week. The school is not affiliated with any religious group, and its purpose is to provide education for Armenian children who are not able to attend school in their homes or who have been forced out of their homes by war or other circumstances.
CHINATOWN.

Pleasures and Pastimes of the Celestials of Providence.—Curious Features of Their Life in America.—Merchants and Laundrymen.

CHINATOWN, here in Providence, is not confined to a given portion of the city, as it is in Boston, New York or any of the other American cities. It is a district which is populated by representatives of the people of the peninsula, the yellow jacket, and the Mandarin. The little Chinese are scattered all over town, living wherever they please and being accounted as good neighbors, with the exception of occasional outbursts of prejudice.

The story of the Chinese laundry in Providence is a well-known one. In the old days, when the children of the city were young, their clothing was carefully washed and ironed by Chinese women. The little ragged Chinese girl, in her apron, would be seen washing clothes in the streets, or hanging them on little lines in the windows of the tenements.

But the Chinese laundry is not the only industry of the Chinese in Providence. They are also engaged in the manufacture of silk stockings, and are known as the "silk stockings" of the city. Their work is of the highest order, and their products are much sought after.

One of the most interesting of the Chinese in Providence is the Chinese photographer. He is a native of China, and has been in this country for many years. He is a skilled photographer, and his work is highly prized.

The Chinese laundry in Providence is a well-known institution. It is owned and operated by Chinese, and is run on the lines of the Chinese laundry in any other American city. The work is well done, and the customers are satisfied.

LITTLE ITALY.

Providence Has Many Colonists from the Sunny Lands of the Mediterranean.—Home Life and Business Ability.—Spruce St. Section.

T

THE outside world knows of Spruce Street, the sun-drenched, tree-lined street of Providence, only what the newspaper men have written or the people who dwell there have told—time after time. Folks read stories of Spruce street razors, of saloons, of gambling and of prostitution. But the street and its people are not so bad as they are drawn, and the supply of liquor and vice is not so large as it is thought to be. On the whole, the street is inhabited by respectable people, and the good and the evil of the race are found side by side.

The people of Spruce Street are a mixture of colors, the majority being Italian. They are a hard-working race, and many of them have made fortunes. Some of them are employed in the factories, while others are engaged in the trade of the street. They are a friendly people, and are always ready to help each other. The street is clean and well-kept, and the houses are well furnished. The people are well-dressed, and the streets are gay with the colors of the rainbow.

The business of the street is conducted in a most orderly manner. The stores are kept open during the day, and the shops are well attended. The people are friendly and helpful, and the street is a place where one can be sure of finding what one wants.

The street is a place of amusement, and there are many places where one can take in a show or listen to a concert. The people are friendly and inviting, and one can be sure of finding a welcome at any time.

in stone houses, which had stone doors, and they used the stone steps up and down the house. Their only, or nearest, neighbors were the few houses on the street, and the few houses down the street. They were all white walls, with black doors, and black windows. The young men of the family used to sit on the steps, and talk, and laugh, and play cards, and smoke cigarettes, and eat apples, and throw stones at the houses down the street. They were all dark-haired, and dark-eyed, and they were all handsome, and they were all brave, and they were all strong, and they were all happy.
