French Canadians employed on the yard, the artist gave it its fine white masticating. However, that they did so a remarkable ability of both, and all them which was typical enough, his manoeuvres at times, rather than the manœuvreur himself. Then the yard and quite a high terms the French触手. She was found to be the case of ships which are "Frenchmen," but a two-burnt illustration, in which the journey was for itself, I would do not her service purposes. But the location of the yard, the color of the Bahama, was the most contrast of all the features which took the eyes away. A good deal of the roll around Haymarket bears, in the theatricals, of which houses and homes are built on the yard and the mill, and most of this color was taken on years ago. For nearly a country stovepipe appear to have been cheaper than rumble them all about here. And, as the end of the company completed some of the work in the deep end of the pot, the more labor to the brick, the bodies worked by the brick-maker who worked on it, you get a very large impression of the way you are a skilful masticating. But the color of the houses, the roof of the Haymarket, and the houses and homes have built on the yard and the mill, and most of the yard have been taken on years ago. Equal Rights and the Offices.
The Equal Rights Club had a lively meeting last night. Two facades were represented: those who wanted to make a clean sweep of the offices, and those who were conservative and not ready to give up the existing order. The former seemed to be more popular, but the latter were by no means out of the question. The meeting was adjourned to next week for further discussion.

The Boss and the Clerk.
The British House of 131 W. 47th St. (the old firm) is not the only one in the city to change its name. The firm of J. W. Smith & Co., located at 123 W. 47th St., has also recently changed its name to J. W. Smith & Co., Ltd. This change is due to the fact that the firm has acquired a new lease and is planning to expand its business.

The Knights of Labor was a national labor union in the United States that arose in the late 1860s and early 1870s. The union was founded in San Francisco in 1869 by Uriah Hill Maynard and became the largest labor union in the United States until the late 1880s. The Knights of Labor was founded as a craft union for skilled and semi-skilled workers, but quickly expanded to include unskilled workers as well. The union's goals were to improve working conditions, increase wages, and provide benefits for members. The Knights of Labor was dissolved in 1897 after a period of decline and internal disputes. The union's legacy lives on in the modern labor movement and its focus on collective bargaining, workers' rights, and social justice.

An Address to the Knights of Labor.

By E. H. PRESTON.

The Knightly Order of Labor—[Address delivered at the Knights of Labor Hall, Wednesday evening, Nov. 24th, 1886.]

In honor of the Knights of Labor, who have made this city a place of business for the Knights of Labor.

Addressed to the Knights of Labor, and delivered at the Knights of Labor Hall, Wednesday evening, Nov. 24th, 1886.

To the Knights of Labor: You have been our pioneers and our leaders in the work of organizing the laboring classes of this country. You have shown the way to all who are laboring for the same object, and to all who are seeking to improve the condition of the working classes of the world. You have shown that by union and by mutual aid we can overcome the difficulties which stand in the way of the improvement of our condition.

End of Address.
OLNEYVILLE SQUARE.

SATURDAY IN OLNEYVILLE.

How Some of the People Pass the Closing Hours of the Week.

OLNEYVILLE, probably, presents to an observer as many features of modern city life as possibly can be seen in any place in the State, and perhaps also in New England.

This is due to the dense population characteristic of this section of Providence.

The day begins with the usual rush and noise as in the country. The square presents an animated scene, being the center of the surrounding country and being the place for the neighboring farmers and their families to meet and socialize.

On the return journey they visit the Olneyville store, which is a popular meeting place and the traditions of its use to make the entry as a success.

An hour later, when the sun is high, and the heat is oppressive, the transformation of the city is completed. The people are in their homes, and the streets are quiet.

The intelligence, as expressed in the general expression of faces, is not so noticeable and the tasteful selection of colors and textures is apparent.

The intelligence from Connecticut to the general population of Olneyville is expressed in the winning smiles on the faces of the people.

Evening finds its attendant sights and scenes in the city the most interesting time of the day.

A bustling scene is apparent as the lights from the streetcars and the neon signs add sparkle to the cityscape.

The city is filled with people, and the streets are busy.

The evening is spent in socializing, and the city is alive with activity.

One of the most satisfying features of the place, as it is contrasted to the foregoing chapter,

KITCHEN BARROW.

The scene presented is a fair illustration of the character of the Olneyville square. A course dinnerwoman has taken the place, and is fully capable of making a good meal, even without the presence of a chef.

The place is especially primitive, but it is charming in its simplicity.

A large table is set for an evening meal, and the guests are seated around it. The table is set with care and attention, and the food is prepared with skill and care.

The guests are seated around the table, and the evening meal begins.

The food is served with care and attention, and the guests enjoy the meal.

LITERARY AND SOCIAL CLUB.

In the evening the club meets, and the evening meal is served.

The meal is enjoyed with the same attention to detail, and the guests are pleased with the experience.

The club is a place where literature and social events are enjoyed, and the members are pleased with the experience.

The Guardian Company's Buses and the New Service to Elevate the Workmen.

Among the great manufacturing enterprises of the city, there is none that has been more rapidly and laboriously and generously dealing with their employees in the Standard Chemical Works, than the number of the company's employees, the group of 250 men who have been employed for some time now. The company has made an earnest effort to make the Standard Chemical Works a model in the way of providing comfortable homes for its employees. The company has not only provided good报酬, but it has also taken steps to make the life of its employees as pleasant as possible. The company has set up a system of night schools, where its employees can gain knowledge and improve their mental and physical condition. The company has also provided recreational facilities, such as libraries and clubs, for its employees. The company has also made provision for medical and surgical care for its employees.

The company has also been very generous in its treatment of its employees during sickness. The company has provided hospitalization facilities, and has also provided medical care for its employees, including doctors and nurses. The company has also provided burial insurance for its employees, and has also provided a pension plan for its employees.

The production is increasing every day, and is not yet at its height. The work is being done as it is wanted, and the pressure of the orders is so great that the factory is working at full capacity. The workers are all well paid, and the conditions of employment are satisfactory. The factory is clean and well-ventilated, and the workers enjoy good working conditions. The work is of high quality, and the products are in great demand.

The factory is located on the outskirts of the city, in a large industrial area. The workers live in nearby suburbs, and commute daily to the factory. The factory is owned by a large corporation, and is part of a larger industrial complex that includes several other factories and warehouses. The factory is well-equipped with modern machinery, and the workers are highly skilled and trained.

The factory is responsible for the manufacture of various products, including textiles, electronics, and machinery. The production lines are well-organized, and the workflow is smooth and efficient. The factory is continually improving its processes, and is committed to quality control and continuous improvement. The factory is a model of industrial efficiency, and is an example of what can be achieved with good management and worker cooperation.
The proprietor is a light-skinned, bright-eyed, intelligent and energetic person of his race, and appears to be a typical Chinaman. He is one of the successful merchants in the city, and is known for his honesty and integrity. His store is well-stocked and he is always ready to serve his customers.

The people in the street are friendly and helpful, and the Chinese are generally considered good business men. The city has a large number of Chinese businesses, and the Chinese are well integrated into the community. They are also known for their hospitality and good-naturedness.

There are three great systems of religion known in China: the Buddhist, the Confucian, and the Taoist. The Confucianism is the most powerful of the three, and it is followed by a large majority of the Chinese. The Buddhist is followed by a smaller number, and the Taoist is followed by the smallest number of Chinese.

There is a great deal of variation in the Chinese language, and the dialects differ greatly. There are many different Chinese languages, and the Chinese people are very proud of their language.

THE GERMAN CHRISTIAN.

Christmas and Cathedrals in the Old Country.

The Christmas festivities in Germany are as gay and cheerful as anywhere else in the world. The streets are adorned with lights and garlands, and the churches are filled with singers and dancers. The people are in high spirits, and the air is filled with the sound of carols and songs of the season.

The Tree.

The Christmas tree is the center of the festivities. It is decorated with lights, candles, and ornaments, and is set up in the center of the room. The tree is usually decorated with red and gold ornaments, and is often adorned with candles. The tree is surrounded by candles and lamps, and is often decorated with garlands of flowers. The tree is usually set up on Christmas Eve, and is kept burning throughout the night.

THE SVEA.

Somebody about the Swedes of Providence and Their Christmas Customs.

There are now residing in this city upwards of 3,000 persons of Swedish descent and nationality, and while they have been in this country for many years, they have retained a number of their former customs and traditions. One of the most noticeable of these customs is the Christmas tree. The tree is decorated with lights, candles, and ornaments, and is set up in the center of the room. The tree is usually decorated with red and gold ornaments, and is often adorned with candles. The tree is surrounded by candles and lamps, and is often decorated with garlands of flowers. The tree is usually set up on Christmas Eve, and is kept burning throughout the night.

MEETING OF THE CENTRAL LABOR UNION OF HAWAII ISLAND

Reports of the People's committee, and orders of the executive committee.

Arrangements for the meeting of the executive committee, and the program for the day.

Remarks by Mr. Herbert C. Merton.

The meeting was called to order at 10:30 a.m. in the Mechanics' Institute. The members present were seated in the order in which they arrived. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, and the following business was transacted:

1. Adoption of the agenda as presented.
2. Appointment of a committee to make arrangements for the meeting of the executive committee.
3. Approval of the program for the day.

Mr. Herbert C. Merton, in the chair, reported that the committee had made satisfactory arrangements for the meeting of the executive committee and had approved the program for the day.

The meeting adjourned at 10:45 a.m.

Remarks by Mr. Herbert C. Merton:

Mr. Herbert C. Merton, in address, said:

The purpose of this meeting is to discuss the current issues of the labor movement in Hawaii Island and to consider ways to improve the conditions of workers in the area.

We have seen a significant increase in the number of workers organizing in recent months, and we must continue to support these efforts. It is important that we strengthen our solidarity and work together to achieve our goals.

The labor movement is facing many challenges, but we must remain united and determined to overcome these obstacles.

The meeting adjourned at 11:00 a.m.

The next meeting of the executive committee will be held on the first Monday of each month at 10:00 a.m. in the Mechanics' Institute.

The Morale of These People Higher Than Ordinarily Deliberate.

There is a prevailing opinion among a large majority of the citizens of Providence, even the more intelligent class, that every Italian residing in the city is a veritable cannibal, a pauper, and paunchy, a woman and always a drunkard, and devoid of natural intelligence. Others go so far as to add that the Italian who wears glasses and carries a useful pocketknife is a dangerous person, one likely to be hostile toward others. These impressions, especially from the standpoint of the Italian colony of Providence, are galling and misleading. It is a great mistake for any community to base its judgment on the actions of a few individuals. The Italians, as a whole, are a people of good character, industrious, and hard-working, and their good name in the city is well-founded.

The Italian Colony of Providence may be said to have been founded in 1858, when Filippo Perini, an Italian laborer, arrived in this city on a bark laden with marble. Mr. Perini, at the time a young man, founded the first marble quarries in the city and opened a small stone quarry on South Main Street. The marble was shipped to Rhode Island Marble Company, located on Smith Street, by the company's boat, and shipped to other parts of the country. The company prospered, and five years later the late Giuseppe M. Arnone, of Arnone, arrived in Providence and opened a second marble quarry. The two men later formed Arnone and Company, a successful marble business, and, declining on retiring in 1870, left the business to his son, Giuseppe. Mr. Arnone, and by dint of hard work and economy they accumulated considerable property, including a large marble factory and a marble quarry.

In 1867 the colony was largely increased, and at the beginning of 1868 it numbered about 175 members. The majority of these members resided on the west side of the city, near the railroad tracks. The colony's growth was due to the influx of additional immigrants, and it continued to grow until 1870, when it was about 400 members. Since then the colony has gradually declined, but it has remained an active and prosperous community.

The Italian Colony of Providence is a community of industrious and enterprising people, and its members are generally respected in the city. They have contributed much to the development of the city, and their influence is felt in many respects. They are well-known for their industry, thrift, and honesty, and they are held in high esteem by the citizens of the city. The Irish Day.

The Nationality of the State atポイント.

GAMES EXHIBITED ON THE GROUND IN THE COLISEUM.

The day's proceedings were attended to purposes of the third annual exhibition of the Irish Nationality, which was held at the Coliseum, Washington, D.C., on Saturday, October 1. The exhibition was opened by the President of the United States, Mr. Theodore Roosevelt, and was attended by a large number of visitors.

The Coliseum was filled to overflowing at 3 o'clock, the hour announced for the addresses by the speakers. The addresses were given in front of a large crowd of Irishmen, who were well acquainted with the language of the country. The day was spent at the Coliseum, and many of the visitors remained to see the closing speeches. The Coliseum was very crowded, and the speeches were over, and the crowd who had stayed in the Coliseum to see the closing speeches.
The first Assembly of ordinary Officers in the Order was held on Monday, Sept. 21, with a membership of 1,000 officers, all of whom were present at the opening session. The rules and regulations of the Order were adopted, and a bazaar was conducted in the main hall, for the sale of all kinds of goods. The first 6 months of the Order were devoted to the organization of the various districts and the cultivation of the Order's principles. In the first year, 1852, the Order had 10,000 members, and in 1853, the Order had 20,000 members. The Order has since grown to over 100,000 members, and its influence is felt throughout the world.
