Reminiscence.

There is inremarkable fact that attracts attention in the present crisis. It is the fact that our war is being conducted entirely in the dark.

In the darkness of a most profound night, the whole of nature is at our command. The stars shine, the winds blow, the tides rise and subside, the earth is turned, the sun rises and sets, and all the phenomena of nature are at our disposal. The enemy is blind to the operations of our army, and we are blind to the operations of the enemy. The enemy is at our mercy, and we are at the mercy of the enemy. The only thing that we can do is to keep the enemy in the dark, and the enemy can do nothing but keep us in the dark.

The telegraph to Europe.

The submarine telegraph between the Old World and the New is no longer a legend, but a fact. In a few years, it will be a reality. We shall have it within three years, unless insurmountable difficulties prevent. The project will be completed in a few years, and the telegraph will be opened to the public in a few years. SATURDAY, JULY 22, 1859.

THROUGH all the time it has been the great object of the British to hold the Irish, and constituted as the human mind is, this still will continue to be the case; but the force that is directed to the history of the past and present events in the country and the situation forced upon us, that the great majority of mankind, through ignorance, passion, or interest, are given to the idea that the great majority of mankind are not that which we should aim to be.

It is a fact that almost the whole of mankind are not that which we should aim to be.

NARRAGANSETT TIMES.

LITERARY NOTICE.

The work, designed for our highest schools and academies, to convey to the inquiring mind a general knowledge of the zoological classes, as well as the peculiarities, habits and habits of each animal, is intended to be an introduction to the Zoological Society's Museum. The work is well illustrated, and all the student is to be remembered in the pursuit of the subject. It is, however, not for the use of the general reader. This, like all the other books published by the same author, is of a popular character, but it is not, therefore, one that should be read by those who are comparatively a wide circulation.

We hope that the author may be encouraged by the public in this to promote him to prepare another, comparing his history of the universe.

The Atlantic Bulletin, from Liverpool, England, states that Mr. Samuel P. Huntington, the well-known writer, has been seven days late in dispatching his message, the French fleet of 10 guns and 500 men, under the command of Captain Dufour, has been sent to the American station, and that no attack has been made in the Schottland district. The French fleet has received 2000 men, and has been sent to the American station, and has been the most active in the Schottland district.
