NARRAGANSETT TIMES.

TAKEN AT HIS WORD.

The adage that "Whoever finds a book to his taste, finds a friend in the book," is indeed true, for he who has a book to his taste, finds a kindred soul in the book. A pleasant, intelligent, good-natured, captain, with whom I was acquainted, was a great reader of books. He used to pride himself on the fact that he had read the works of almost every author in the English language. His library was a veritable museum of literary art. In it, he had works on every subject under the sun, ranging from ancient history to modern politics. He was a man of wide reading and deep knowledge, and his library was a storehouse of information. In it, he found solace and inspiration, and he took pride in sharing his knowledge with others. His library was a testament to his love of learning and his desire to know more about the world. It was a symbol of his passion for books and his dedication to reading. His library was a reflection of his personality, and it was a place where he could escape the cares of the world and immerse himself in a world of his own creation.
