Dear Charlotte:

Thanks so much for your note as well as for your telephone call when you were here recently. It was great to catch up with you.

The Institute of Museum Services has been quietly doing its job. Since Susan Kent resigned as Director at the end of the Bush Administration, the agency has been very ably headed by Acting Director, Linda Bell. Linda, who has many years of museum experience at SITES, the NEA's Museum Program and the International Exhibitions Foundation, is a fine transition leader until President Clinton appoints his new Director. There is no word on when this might happen.

I thought you might like to see a summary of the Institute's budget request for Fiscal Year 1994. In the current budget climate, level funding from one year to the next is regarded as a relatively positive move.

With all best wishes,

Sincerely,

Alexander D. Crary
