Institute of Museum Services Announces
Federal Funding for Museums

The Institute of Museum Services, a newly created federal agency within the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Education in HEW, today announced the award of $3.7 million to 256 museums in the U.S.

These museums were among 859 from all 50 states, the District of Columbia, and Puerto Rico which applied for assistance in General Operating Support or Special Projects.

Mrs. Lee Kimche, appointed by President Carter to head the Institute, said "In spite of the fact that the funding opportunity was not announced until March, over 800 museums of the nation's approximately 7,500, applied. In our second year of operation, we expect about three times that number of applications."

Funds for the awards were made possible through the Museum Services Act, Title II of the Arts, Humanities, and Cultural Affairs Act of 1976. The General Operating Support category, which Congress authorized, is an unusual form of federal aid for institutions. Kimche said, "The establishment of the Institute demonstrates an important shift in the federal government's commitment to museums. No longer are these institutions considered merely shelters for special projects; they are now viewed as cultural foundations which need continual support to exist, build, experiment, and expand."

Commenting on the first year of operation, George C. Seybolt, Chairman of the National Museum Services Board, the policy making body of the Institute, noted that the grant applications reflected the wide diversity of American museums and their program. Applicants included art museums, children's museums, botanical gardens, historical museums, museums of natural history, nature centers, planetaria, science museums, zoological parks, aquaria, and general and specialized museums. The Act specifically included these kinds of institutions in its definition of the word "museum" because many of these kinds of institutions had no other source of federal funding prior to the establishment of the Institute. Diversity also was reflected in the sizes of institutions which applied. The smallest museum's annual budget was $205.00; the largest was $32 million.

The appended tables list the grantees.
