3-30-1981

Reagan Administration: Funding Cuts News Articles (1981-1982): Response or Comment 03

William Peak
Alice J. King
Irma Spencer

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.uri.edu/pell_neh_l_71

Recommended Citation

This Response or Comment is brought to you for free and open access by the Education: National Endowment for the Arts and Humanities, Subject Files I (1973-1996) at DigitalCommons@URI. It has been accepted for inclusion in Reagan Administration: Funding Cuts News Articles (1981-1982) by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@URI. For more information, please contact digitalcommons-group@uri.edu.
In response to Lewis H. Lapham's "Why Patronize America's Mediocre Arts?" [op-ed, March 20], in which he states that "Americans have a talent for brilliant interpretation and performance, but they haven't got the knack for making works of art."

I disagree. For example: Mark Twain, Georgia O'Keeffe, T. S. Eliot, Nathaniel Hawthorne, James M. Whistler, Thomas Pynchon, Aaron Copeland, Herman Melville, Isadora Duncan, Edward Hopper, Charles Ives, William Gaddis, Albert Pinkham Ryder, Tennessee Williams, George Gershwin, Martha Graham, William Faulkner, Frank Lloyd Wright and Walt Whitman ... just to name a few.

With one sweep of his poison pen, Mr. Lapham not only denies us our cultural heritage, but undermines our future as well, for only in a nation that recognizes, values and supports the arts—with public as well as private dollars—will they flourish.

When the current administration proposes massive cuts in an already inadequate arts budget, that's no sign of relief Mr. Lapham hears; it's a meal of anguish.

ALICE J. KLING
Washington

I could hardly believe my eyes as I read Mr. Lapham's column on American mediocrity in the arts. May I just point out to him that:

1) Our country is barely 200 years old, and has made more progress in artistic innovation than any other country of the same period.

2) Art is never considered great until future generations have passed judgment.

3) There would have been precious little great art produced in Europe had it not been for the financial and political support of patrons over the centuries.

4) American industrial barons have made vast contributions to support our arts. Does Mr. Lapham advocate that they should assume complete responsibility for American artistic endeavors or that they should save their money and invest elsewhere?

IRMA SPENCER
The Metro Transit Union Reply