4-7-1981

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.uri.edu/pell_neh_I_71

Recommended Citation
https://digitalcommons.uri.edu/pell_neh_I_71/46

This Report is brought to you for free and open access by the Education: National Endowment for the Arts and Humanities, Subject Files I (1973-1996) at DigitalCommons@URI. It has been accepted for inclusion in Reagan Administration: Funding Cuts News Articles (1981-1982) by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@URI. For more information, please contact digitalcommons-group@uri.edu.

The AMA urges favorable action on legislation that would make the VA special pay program a permanent one, and that would provide compensation levels for VA

employees comparable to those received by physicians in other branches of government service.

Sincerely,

JANICE E. BASKIND, M.D.

statement in support of the national endowment

for the arts funding

hon. ted weiss

in the house of representatives

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Speaker, we are at a critical juncture in the history of public support for the arts. Just last year the subcommittee on Postsecondary Education reauthorized the national endowment for the arts for 5

more years. We felt that the endowment's importance to this country warranted not only its continued existence, but considerably more money with which it could perform its vital function.

Today the Reagan administration is asking Congress to appropriate to the arts a mere $58 million. This figure is $165 million less than that authorized by the Congress last year; half of the amount proposed by President Carter before leaving office; $76 million less than the art endowment's budget for the current year, and only $36 million more than the $52 million that the bill would have supported had the committee continued to fund the endowment.

But we are at a critical juncture in the history of public support for the arts. Today, the Reagan administration is asking Congress to appropriate to the arts a mere $58 million. This figure is $165 million less than that authorized by the Congress last year; half of the amount proposed by President Carter before leaving office; $76 million less than the Art Endowment's budget for the current year, and only $36 million more than the $52 million that the bill would have supported had the committee continued to fund the endowment.

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Speaker, we are at a critical juncture in the history of public support for the arts. Just last year the subcommittee on Postsecondary Education reauthorized the national endowment for the arts for 5 more years. We felt that the endowment's importance to this country warranted not only its continued existence, but considerably more money with which it could perform its vital function.

Today the Reagan administration is asking Congress to appropriate to the arts a mere $58 million. This figure is $165 million less than that authorized by the Congress last year; half of the amount proposed by President Carter before leaving office; $76 million less than the Art Endowment's budget for the current year, and only $36 million more than the $52 million that the bill would have supported had the committee continued to fund the endowment.

But we are at a critical juncture in the history of public support for the arts. Today, the Reagan administration is asking Congress to appropriate to the arts a mere $58 million. This figure is $165 million less than that authorized by the Congress last year; half of the amount proposed by President Carter before leaving office; $76 million less than the Art Endowment's budget for the current year, and only $36 million more than the $52 million that the bill would have supported had the committee continued to fund the endowment.

Mr. WEISS. Mr. Speaker, we are at a critical juncture in the history of public support for the arts. Just last year the subcommittee on Postsecondary Education reauthorized the national endowment for the arts for 5 more years. We felt that the endowment's importance to this country warranted not only its continued existence, but considerably more money with which it could perform its vital function.

Today the Reagan administration is asking Congress to appropriate to the arts a mere $58 million. This figure is $165 million less than that authorized by the Congress last year; half of the amount proposed by President Carter before leaving office; $76 million less than the Art Endowment's budget for the current year, and only $36 million more than the $52 million that the bill would have supported had the committee continued to fund the endowment.

But we are at a critical juncture in the history of public support for the arts. Today, the Reagan administration is asking Congress to appropriate to the arts a mere $58 million. This figure is $165 million less than that authorized by the Congress last year; half of the amount proposed by President Carter before leaving office; $76 million less than the Art Endowment's budget for the current year, and only $36 million more than the $52 million that the bill would have supported had the committee continued to fund the endowment.