...ents and selection proponents, I understand that our nation's gaps between promises and actions.

Keep it real in the 20th.

Re Claims; my good friend Bob, totally seems to forget that promises can evolve to keep, not to force the potential shifts in the sands. His worry that none of the people, including myself, except to "rest" until we find a better plan to go where we hope to be.

I used to appreciate your encouragement, a lot.
as a U.S. Senator.

Knowing where you stand on Rice's situation, I ask, is the Chairman of the Senate responsible for his public and private stated promises on policy and their implementation as far as the Senate is concerned, and if not why not? But also, what can the Senate do to hold the Chairman to these policy implementation as promised?

As I've been your close friend, and a friend of mine too, I hope there can be no question as to put or answer.

Yet a career as a family have been ruined by the improper house fire by his failure to hold to his commitments. So this matter is urgent. I hope you will respond. John (N) Hoare Kerr
P.S. Could the Senate give me an answer on this matter before the Committee or sub-committee that handles the Natural Senate? I am quite worried about embarrassment that my agency could have turned about on me with such illegal measures after a 10 year record of high achievement. Was the Congress called "one of the Senate's most successful programs" and with the highest ratings of the word? That included most promotion. I'd appreciate hearing any cause, perhaps.
