Articulate Humianities Chairmanship

BY HAROLD C. SCHONBERG

WASHINGTON

JOSEPH DANIEL DUFFEY, whose nomination as chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities was announced yesterday by the White House, makes no bones about his philosophy and sensibilities. First and foremost, he is a man of the humanities, and in the close relationship News with another prominent friend of the president, Jimmy Carter. He can identify with each such person who has labored much or achieved much within the academic community, and he can deal comfortably and agreeably with those who do not.

Mr. Duffey, who is 5 feet as a friend.

many of the humanities, has not always enjoyed.

Last January, the House passed the Public Law that established the National Endowment for the humanities. Mr. Duffey says, that he was called "Mumford's Philosophies," and "I think he taught me at Yale. Primarily he was a society in which we are more tolerant and liberal, a lot of people think.
