LUNCHEON

Luncheon will be served at the Church of the Transfiguration, 1665 Broad St., at 12:30 noon. Following the luncheon, members of the R.I.L.A. will be able to attend the afternoon session in the hall at the Church, thus cancelling any need for additional transportation. The meeting will reconvene at 2:00 p.m. and end at approximately 3:30 p.m.

OUR SPEAKERS

Miss Maribelle Cormack comes of Scottish descent, her father being born in the Orkney Islands, though she herself was born in Buffalo. When she was twelve, the Cormack family made a return trip to Scotland, and Miss Cormack's recollections of this visit colored much of her writing for young people later on. She has had published many stories and books of nonfiction for children. Her interest in astronomy is far-reaching, and through her own enthusiasm the Planetarium in Roger Williams Park received its initial impetus . . . Miss Cormack holds American college degrees in American Literature and Biology, and has done graduate work at the Universities of Vienna and Geneva, as well. A recent visit to Hawaii, where she engaged in research at the Bishop Museum in Honolulu, has given lustre to the Pacific Hall of Roger Williams Park Museum.

Dr. Howard D. Wood, principal of Hope St. High School, will speak on "The evaluative program of the Secondary Schools", with special reference to the section of this program which affects Public and School Librarians in particular.

Dr. Wood has been principal at Hope High School since September 1938. Previously he was principal at Roger Williams Junior High School for over six years, and while in this capacity did much to develop a guidance program for studies and activities which has given new life to student-teacher relationships. Dr. Wood has always specialized in educational administration and has made signal contributions through his work in the Providence Schools.

Mrs. F. D. Tootell, a Trustee of the Kingston Free Library, will speak on the development of the museum which is connected to the Library. Although housed in a separate stone building, it is an excellent place for keeping old and valuable town records, deeds and small historic objects which were donated to the Library by friends and older citizens of the township.

OF THE STATE

Auburn Public Library

The big news at the Auburn Public Library is the gift of a new Library Charging desk with matching swivel chairs for our Children's Library.

The money to make this purchase was presented most unexpectedly at the Christmas party of our Library's Board of Trustees. The desk is to be given in memory of Mrs. Mary Greene by Mrs. Robert P. Winsor and Mr. Ralph Winsor, a board member.

Our separate Children's Library has been open for five years, and during this time we have used a large table for charging desk. This gift will be a beautiful, most useful, and much needed addition to the Children's Library.

Barrington Public Library

The Barrington Public Library celebrated its 75th Anniversary on November 11th, with an "open house" to which the townspeople and librarians of nearby libraries were invited. Pictures of olden days were on exhibit. Library patrons were happy to lend the pictures and newcomers to the town vied with one another in identifying places and people. Mrs. Emma Bradford, the first Librarian and Librarian for fifty years was present, as well as Miss Mary Falt, former Librarian, and now Librarian in Glastonbury, Conn.

After our celebration, we settled down to a winter of high circulation and heavy demands from the schools, hardly interrupted by our numerous blizzards. We feel such pressing need for a larger Junior Room and Reference Room that a Library Expansion Committee has been formed, with Henry S. Chaffee as Chairman. We, of the library, are hoping for a new building, but we may have to be content with an addition to an already sprawling building. We are now studying population statistics and trends, recent library architecture, and school assignments and schedules to enable us to present a clear picture of what we need and why. When we have all our ammunition, we will venture forth.

SUSAN E. DEMERY,

Librarian

Elmwood Public Library

The Elmwood Public Library was happy to have been chosen by the A. L. A. Great Books Selection Committee to receive one of the 1,600 sets of Great Books of the Western World.

In the fall an illustrated lecture on "Scenery and Culture of Korea" was given in our Auditorium by Mr. William Austin of the Graduate School, Brown University.

In March, we sponsored two evening travelogues with the World Affairs Council of Rhode Island. At the first one Mrs. Harold P. Williams of Cranston, showed kodachrome slides and told about "The Mayflower Pilgrimage to England and Holland." Color movies telling about our Latin American neighbors were shown at the second one.

The Librarian participated in the annual Careers Day program held at Hope High School last November.

We now have a new Ditto machine and have been compiling monthly book lists.

We are in the process of starting a record collection which we hope to have available to the public this spring.

The spotlight for 1956 is focused on the Washington Park Branch. With the commissioning of an architect and the submitting of sketches and proposals, the possibility of Hose 18 Fire Station being transformed into the new home of the Washington Park Branch becomes more a reality and less of a dream.

During the fall and winter months our meeting room was used by the University of Rhode Island Extension Division to conduct a survey course in the fundamentals of library science. Professor Allen taught the course to an eager group of over 60. The success of this course has encouraged the Extension Division to explore the possibility of a more ambitious program in Librarianship at a future date.

We continue to make ourselves heard and seen in the community by sponsoring a television and two radio programs, and conducting noon hour music record concerts and book talks. The noon hour book chats have proven that people still enjoy talking about good books in a friendly and informal atmosphere.

A weekly list of events, "What's Going on at the Providence Public Library", is sent to about 70 persons and places, making up a cross section of downtown Providence, so that our noon time activities are brought to the attention of downtown workers and shoppers. The response has been encouraging. This weekly list of events is also distributed widely in the community, through our branches and the central building.

The following young women received appointments to the Library staff upon graduating from the Library Training Class in February: Norma D. DiBattista, Cecile J. Dufresne, Ruth Y. Ingraham, Barbara Lydon, Barbara M. Marandola, and Judith A. McCauley. Our Training Class will reach a milestone when in September of 1956 it enters its 30th year.

Providence-Barrington Bible College

The library of Providence-Barrington Bible College has acquired two significant collections of religious materials recently.

One collection has netted around 900 titles in religion, of which nearly half are devoted to specialized areas of Church history. This collection also includes a valuable pamphlet collection, as yet uncataloged, which deals extensively with obscure religious cults.

The second but major collection consists of the library of the Head of the Department of Religious Studies in a prominent New England University. It contains approximately 1300 titles and is especially rich in documentation for research in biblical and historical fields.

A collection of about 2000 titles in literature and travel is being processed by the library at present. Other additions to the library services in recent months include a small beginning collection of the College Archives, a microfilm reader and films, an audio-visual department including 1500 slides and a small group of filmstrips, and a phonograph record collection of about 3000 items consisting chiefly of classical music.

Tyler Free Library

With the gift from the town of Foster of the old Moosup Valley School house, 'across the way' the stack space of the Tyler Free Library will be doubled. The original Library was built by local neighborhood cooperation, and similarly the renovation of the school building is being done by donated labor and materials. This school house has an interesting history, built approximately 150 years ago; the basement at one time served as a Church, and was known as the "Vestry", and this locality at that time took its name from it—The Vestry District. Town records show that this was a "subscription" school", a privately run and supported school, typical of its time.

The Tyler Free Library, Foster, R.I. would like to obtain a second-hand catalog cabinet. Please contact Lilla Knight, Greene, R. I., if you have any available.

We are proud to announce that our circulation for 1955 was 92,502 and of this 50,429 was from our Children's Room. The children's circulation was a 10% gain over last year.

In January Miss Sally Coy and Mr. Curley addressed a gathering of PTA members in Providence. The Survey and how PTA can aid local libraries was discussed.

In April Mr. Thomas Hazard, Treasurer-Elect and Mr. Curley talked to a group of library minded people at Foster. Mrs. Darman was the host librarian.

The course in Library Science offered by the University of Rhode Island Extension division at the Providence Public Library last year will be succeeded in the Fall by an enlarged curriculum leading to a Certificate in library service. Librarians throughout the state will be notified of developments in the immediate future.

Mr. Peter R. Murrow is the well known Librarian of a Middle West University Library. The following is an excerpt of a speech given at a library association meeting some time ago.

PURPOSE OF STATE LIBRARY ASSOCIATIONS

. . . State library associations should pursue on the local level the objectives of our national organizations. State aid, state legislation, publicity, budgets for the State Library are only a few of the problems that are rightly the concern of state library associations.

Often too, district meetings are the only ones that the librarian of smaller libraries can afford to attend. Their problems which are of a practical, day-to-day nature can be resolved through local workshops or free discussion forums where, by necessity, the audience should be limited to those who are interested in those problems . . .

The officer of any organization should be able to handle his job to the best of his ability. Even more important is the fact that this officer should be the one who can best handle the office. There is work to be done and the reason why so many state library associations lack the strength of other professional organizations is that too often the leadership is proffered as an honor rather than as a duty . . .

Every organization has a "house organ" and library associations are no exceptions. In gathering local news, state library associations bulletins should not try to compete with national library periodicals. The cost is too prohibitive for one thing. For another, members of a local organization are rightly interested in local news and local problems . . .

A library association meeting should be an open market for the free exchange of ideas. Remember that your organization is only as strong as the strength imparted to it by its membership. When was the last time you offered help? Did you ever run for an office, or make the attempt? Do you ever speak up at meetings? Do you have any ideas or suggestions that will make your library association more like what you'd like it to be? . . . Remember this, that the best meetings will always be the ones where good leadership meets the interest and the response of its audience . . .

PUBLIC LIBRARY SURVEY FOR RHODE ISLAND

In 1955, The Rhode Island Library Association conducted a survey of the public libraries of the state to determine the effectiveness of library service, areas where improvement is needed and what steps might be taken to effect this improvement. On the basis of returns from 59 libraries, the following report is herewith submitted:

The role of the public library in the community is a vital one. As an agency for promoting interest in and materials for in-school and out-of-school education and recreation, it is in a unique position.

The extent of this service, and to a great degree its effectiveness, is closely allied with the financial structure of the library.

Here the survey points out some obvious yet startling facts. The financial structure upon which effective service must be built is sorely lacking. In the state there are some bright spots, but these are generally due to gifts received from public spirited citizens. Unfortunately, these situations are the exceptions rather than the rule.

Only five libraries reporting have an annual income exceeding $1.50 per capita. This is the figure established by the American Library Association as the minimum necessary for effective library service. Twenty-five libraries have a total income of less than thirty cents per capita, nine receive between thirty and sixty cents per capita, and seven libraries between sixty and ninety cents.

Inadequate as these amounts certainly are, the portions contributed by the respective communities are even more significant.

Only one community, covered by the survey, contributes over one dollar per capita to library support, three communities contribute between eighty cents and a dollar, two between sixty and eighty cents, eight between forty and sixty cents, eight communities contribute between twenty and forty cents per capita, and the remaining twenty-eight between twenty cents and no contribution at all.

What is the Significance of these figures? They mean that lacking necessary funds, most rural libraries are open less than a full week, and in many instances, are open only a few hours. They mean that book stocks are depleted, and valuable reference books are either not to be found on the shelves, or if they are, they are of an out-dated edition. They mean that maintenance, salaries, and services are below the desired level of performance.

That the library is an educational institution is acknowledged. Nowhere may the library make a greater contribution than with its work with the young school children of the community. School libraries are often inadequate or nonexistent. Early closing hours and tight bus schedules place many school libraries beyond the reach of the student. With these young students, the public library stands alone as a source of educational material, and here, due to a lack of materials, facilities, and funds, it cannot adequately meet the challenge.

Adult education would also benefit greatly from a stronger financial structure. The housewife, farmer, businessman and laborer all need a well rounded library.

It is regrettable that while communities are often cognizant of the need for adequate schools and teachers (and well they should be), that these same communities almost totally disregard the needs of and their need for a library. Indeed, if it weren't for the librarian in many cases working for next to nothing, and in some cases donating her salary to the book fund, many libraries would cease to function.

Basically, this is a community problem, and one which should in part be handled by the local citizens.

However, there are areas which are beyond the scope of the individual cities and towns, and where constructive work cannot be done on a local basis. More coordination and better channels for the flow of technical information are definitely needed. Also, many and possibly most towns cannot, due to other financial pressures, meet their library obligations fully. The state, in the past, has recognized this fact and made an attempt to assist libraries just as it has done with schools and other areas of education. Unfortunately, the assistance has been small and compares unfavorably with state expenditures in other fields.

There is need for something to be done to prevent further deterioration of an already weak situation.

The following recommendations are therefore submitted:

1. Every city or town authority should be contacted in 1956 and made aware of the local situation. A request for an increase in funds to provide basic up-to-date reference tools such as encyclopedias and dictionaries should be made. The Association will attempt to assist the librarians by arranging five regional conferences to which trustees will be invited, and where methods for making appeals will be fully explored.

2. Appointment of a State Field Director to assist the State Librarian. The Field Director should be professionally trained and have sufficient professional experience to work with and stimulate the efforts of rural libraries. This would also entail sufficient funds for equipment and expenses needed to carry out the functions of the position.

3. Increased State aid to rural libraries. The Federal Aid Bill to libraries has a chance of passing and becoming law. If it does, the state will have to increase its expenditures to libraries, if it wishes to participate in the program. Under the matching program, expenses incurred now to meet a current need would not further increase the State's obligation.

4. The Rhode Island Library Association should assist or instigate plans for educational facilities and institutes to be made available for librarians, so that they may better be equipped with the tools of their profession.

5. The possibility of shifting or rotating collections being used should be explored fully. In this manner, limited funds might be more fully utilized.
