Editor's Notebook

Well, I've survived a third round in my life under the surgeon's knife, and have come off feeling the better for it. As I told one librarian, however, a short period of recuperation yet remains where inductive leaps, the riding of hobby horses, and chasing rainbows is prohibited. So this issue of the Bulletin may be a little out of character.

Seriously, I would like to thank Myron Kirkes for guest editing last month's Bulletin so well, and to welcome him as the regular Bulletin staffer in charge of public and regional library news. There have been other staff changes too this month. Peg Caldwell assumes charge of school and special library news, Lynn Bohling becomes copy editor, Ruth Corkill joins us as circulation manager, and Carol Gold takes over as advertising manager. Carol, fresh out of Simmons library school and the editorship of its student newsletter, replaces our old friend Kevin Carty, who served the Bulletin devotedly as advertising manager under several editors.

This month's Bulletin contains the final reports of the sub committees of the R.I. L. A. Long Range Planning Committee. These reports represent a great deal of work and thought, and chair-person Louise Sherby and all committee members deserve the congratulations and deep thanks of the RILA membership. The membership is requested to read all of the reports prior to the Spring Conference where they will be discussed. Please pay special heed to the Continuing Education report, which is the longest, and also one of the finest pieces of research to be done in RILA in some time. Participation in the Spring Conference discussion of these reports is your opportunity to chart new directions for RILA. Or as Lewis Carroll put it:

"Cheshire-Puss," she began... "Would you tell me, please, which way I ought to go from here?"

"That depends a good deal on where you want to get to," said the Cat.

For this month's cover illustration we again owe thanks to Aubrey Beardsley. This one is taken from his cover design for volume 2 of The Yellow Book. Next month's Bulletin will be the work, in form and content, of the students at the URI Graduate Library School - I think that you'll be pleasantly surprised.

Report and Recommendations of the Long Range Implementation Committee

to the Members of the Rhode Island Library Association

April 1976

At the Mid-Winter Conference held at Providence College, February 20, 1975, the membership of the Rhode Island Library Association ranked in priority order the recommendations set forth in the report of the Long Range Planning Committee. The recommendations as ranked by the membership are:

- (1) That a publicist be engaged to promote, using the media and the best professional techniques, the public, school, academic, and special libraries of Rhode Island.*
- (2) That the Rhode Island Library Association cooperate with the Graduate Library School and the Division of University Extension (soon to be called the College of Continuing Education) at the University of Rhode Island in the development of a sound program of continuing library education.*
- (3) That there be introduced in Rhode Island a state-wide public library borrowers card.*
- (4) That the Rhode Island Library Association actively promote the appointment of a School Library Specialist in the State Department of Education.*
- (5) That there be established in the Graduate Library School at the University of Rhode Island a Bureau of Consultation and Research designed to serve the libraries and information services, the librarians and information workers, of Rhode Island and New England.*
- (6) That there be established in Rhode Island a comprehensive system by which the bibliographic data made available to the New England Library Information Network from the Library of Congress via the Ohio College Library Center can be rapidly disseminated to any interested public, school, academic, or special library in the state.*
- (7) That the Rhode Island Library Association provide a forum within which the advantages and disadvantages of the unionization of library employees, professional and non-professional alike, can be thoroughly discussed.*

On March 12, 1975, the RILA Executive Board passed the following motion:

That the Long Range Plan Implementation Committee be convened to consider means for implementation of the Long Range Planning Committee report with special attention to the first, second, and third priorities set at the Mid-Winter Conference; and to provide the Association specific information dealing with cost, personnel, and time.

Therefore, on April 9, 1975, Robert C. Maier, chairman of the Professional Committee, convened the first meeting of the Long Range Plan Implementation Committee at the Warwick Public Library. Twenty persons had expressed an interest in the work of the committee and attended that first meeting. Of those original 20, 16 members have been able to follow through the work of the committee to its completion. The chairman would like to express her thanks to the present 28 committee members without whom this report would not have been written and a special thanks to those original 16 who have contributed a great deal of time and effort throughout the past year.

At that first meeting, the committee examined the charge from the Executive Board and decided to expand it to include the fourth ranked priority. The committee then decided the best way to carry out its charge would be to break up into four subcommittees. Each sub-committee would be responsible for one of the first four priorities as determined by the membership at the Mid-Winter Conference. Those subcommittees and their respective chairmen are, in order, (1) Public Relations, Jean Nash; (2) Continuing Education, JoAnn Fuchs; (3) State-wide Library Card, Sydney Wright; and (4) School Library Specialist, Irene Demers. A list of Subcommittee members immediately follows this introduction.

The role of the Chairman of the Long Range Plan Implementation Committee has been primarily organizational. The Chairman has been responsible for seeing that the four sub-committees have carried out their charge, acting as a liaison with the RILA Executive Board, chairing meetings of the full committee, preparing the interim reports presented at the Spring and Fall (1975) Conferences and preparation of the final report.

The report itself is in four sections. Each section is the final report of each sub-committee. The sub-committee reports are arranged in their priority order. In instances where appendixes are included, they appear at the end of each section rather than at the end of the entire report; thus each section is a complete mini-document.

On behalf of the entire committee, the Chairman would like to express our thanks and appreciation for the help and support received from the RILA Executive Board and the membership during the past year. Even though we have not in every instance been able to satisfactorily complete our charge, we have made a strong beginning and trust that our recommendations will be carried out.

REPORT OF THE PUBLIC RELATIONS SUB-COMMITTEE OF THE LONG RANGE PLAN IMPLEMENTATION COMMITTEE OF THE RHODE ISLAND

LIBRARY ASSOCIATION CHARGED AS FOLLOWS:

"That a publicist be engaged to promote, using the media and the best professional techniques, the public, school, academic, and special libraries of Rhode Island."

When the Public Relations Subcommittee of the LRPIC began its work in the Spring of 1975, questionnaires were sent to public libraries in R.I. to obtain input from librarians as to the areas in which the publicist might be most useful. It soon became apparent that there would be no funds available from RILA to hire a publicist, however.

A new chairperson headed the committee in the Fall of 1975, and subsequent meetings of the Public Relations Subcommittee led to the belief that since it was impossible to carry out the original charge made to the subcommittee, the members of the committee would consider their ad hoc status, and make recommendations that could be carried out by the Public Affairs Committee of RILA, under Article IX of the ByLaws of RILA, whereby provision is made for a Public Relations Subcommittee.

Recommendations made by the PP Subcommittee of the LRPIC, and by members of the other subcommittees of the LRPIC include:

1. A central location for exhibit materials that could be used by librarians in the state who do not have artistic skills or resources to make their own exhibits. Use of regional artists and/or space to be considered.
2. Greater contact with social service agencies urged.
3. A handbook of programs that have been successfully carried out by some libraries, and could be adapted for use by other libraries.
4. A new questionnaire to be sent to all libraries - not just public.
5. More contact with people at newspapers, radio and TV stations urged. More utilization of the RILA Bulletin to send out information
6. Looking into the purchase of media spots (such as Houston, Texas P.L. spot)
7. Contacting Library Public Relations Council concerning their program of publicity packets.
8. Obtaining copies of the John Cotton Dana Award scrapbooks (available on ILL from ALA Headquarters Library) and displaying them at RILA meetings.
9. Trying to obtain funding from the R.I. State Council on the Arts, the R.I. Foundation, or other sources.

One project begun by the Public Relations Subcommittee and completed in March was the selection of a LOGO to represent RILA and libraries in general. There were only seven people who submitted entries (some sent more than one) in spite of the fact that the contest was extended, did receive publicity in the RILA Bulletin and notices were sent to schools and colleges. Patricia Couch of New Bedford, a student at the Graduate Library School, was the winner. She has received the prize of $25.00 and is expected to be at the Spring meeting of RILA. The Logo can be used on stationery or can be made larger for use on billboards and the like.

The members of the Public Relations Subcommittee feel there is a very great need for more public relations - for individual libraries, and on a state-wide basis - especially now when libraries are asking for increased funding. It is felt that having a lobbyist at the State House (now an actuality) is a step in the right direction.

Recycle Your Library Mags

Ruth Corkill,
Pawtucket Public Library

A telephone call to Dan Bergen a few weeks ago confirmed my suspicion that URI library school students have a serious lack of access to library and information science-related periodicals. What prompted my call was the knowledge that we have been discarding duplicate copies of such items after they have served their purpose, retaining only one of each for our periodical collection. Having back issues of LJ, American Libraries, Wilson Bulletin, ASIS publications, etc., available for use during my own stint in grad school was an enormous help to me (at the University of Maryland, where all duplicate copies were made circulating). And I hate to see these things landing in the wastebasket.

Anyway, Dan was overjoyed at my suggestion that we save them for their students' use, accumulating a few copies and then forwarding them to Dan's office at the URI campus via the interlibrary loan system. URI has had a subscription budget tightening, and students rarely get a chance at issues until many months have passed. So save your discards and send them to Dan. I'm sure unwanted monographs would also be welcome. This can be a multifaceted recycling effort by a profession which is no slouch at contributing to the paper explosion!

REPORT OF THE SUB-COMMITTEE ON CONTINUING EDUCATION OF THE LONG RANGE

PLAN IMPLEMENTATION COMMITTEE

OF THE

RHODE ISLAND LIBRARY ASSOCIATION CHARGED AS FOLLOWS:

"That the Rhode Island Library Association cooperate with the Graduate Library School and the Division of University Extension (soon to be called the College of Continuing Education) at the University of Rhode Island in the development of a sound program of continuing library education."

The sub-committee merged with the RILA Education Committee on April 9, 1975 and members began planning for a thorough study of the long-range proposal. The Continuing Education Sub-Committee began its work by surveying the CE needs of library and information science personnel within the state: first practicing librarians, secondly library administrators and thirdly library support staff. The results of the three surveys were tabulated and used as a resource in preparing this report. It should be pointed out that the committee's primary aim is to create a framework within which a viable state-wide program of continuing education might be carried out. Very definite suggestions for courses, seminars, and workshops will be made in the body of the report. These are meant as examples of the type of continuing education opportunities which might be offered not as the only ones that should be offered or as the ideal. Rather, they are presented as a starting point from which the state's library association can build a strong and meaningful program of continuing library education.

Input and advice has come from several members of the faculty of the Graduate Library School at URI, from the Department of State Library Services, from the URI Extension Division, and from the Rhode Island School Media Association-- as well as from all those individuals who responded to our surveys.

The chairman would like to thank all those who have served on the committee and also those who have helped in an advisory capacity. The committee's report will be in six parts:

- I. Definition of Continuing Education.
- II. General recommendations.
- III. Distribution of responsibilities for CE
- IV. Three-year plan for continuing library education in Rhode Island.
- V. Implementation of the three-year plan.
- VI. Appendices
  1. What is CELENE
  2. Definition of CEU
  3. Bibliography

1. DEFINITION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION.

Certainly one of the most significant issues facing the library science profession today is that of continuing education. In 1972 the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science conducted a series of regional hearings designed to identify the concerns involved in meeting future information requirements. One of the prime national needs identified was continuing education for professional librarians, library support staff, and library trustees. The American Association of Library Schools has drafted a Position Paper explaining the need for coordinated action in this area:

"Present day economic developments, including changes in our society, the accelerated growth of new knowledge, the implications of new technology, and the increasing demands for additional or changing types of library, information and communication services support the assumption that continuing library education is one of the most important problems facing librarianship today. In recognition of these societal changes and increased demand for professional services, the library and information science professions should adopt a vigorous role in providing opportunities for continuing education for all their profession. Libraries designed to serve the information needs of the citizenry will not service fully unless librarians first share and agree on some fundamental ideas as to what constitutes a practical and feasible plan of continuing library education." (Special Libraries, Dec., 1973, pg. 580-581)

As a result of the above hearings, NCLIS called for "a nationwide program of continuing education for personnel in the library and information science field." The commission's recommendations and the study that followed led to the formation of CLENE--the Continuing Library Education Network and Exchange in 1975. For purposes of this report we will accept the New England Library Board Continuing Education Task Force interpretation of CLENE's definition of continuing education:

"Continuing education is any activity that involves refreshing or updating a person's education, diversifying to a new area within a field, or learning greater than or different from the body of courses required for entrance into the field. Continuing education assumes that the individual carries the basic responsibility for his or her own development and that life-long learning is necessary for everyone to prevent obsolescence."

II. GENERAL RECOMMENDATIONS.

A. That there be created within the Rhode Island Library Association a standing committee to be called the Steering Committee on Continuing Education, the basic functions of which shall be promoting and coordinating continuing education programs for library personnel in the state. This Committee should be appointed by July 1, 1976. (See Part V)

B. That there should be a delineation of responsibilities for continuing education of library personnel among the individuals and groups concerned. Three agencies in Rhode Island should assume major responsibility for planning in this area: The Rhode Island Library Association, the Graduate School of Library Science at the University of Rhode Island, and the Department of State Library Services. (See Part III)

C. That the Rhode Island Library Association join the Continuing Library Education Network and Exchange (CLENE) as an institutional member. (See Appendix I)

D. That the Continuing Education Unit (CEU) be endorsed as a valid measure of non-credit educational activity and that its acceptance and use be recommended to those agencies planning continuing education programs and to library directors in granting recognition for staff development. (See Appendix II)

F. That the Three-Year Plan submitted in this report be revised and updated annually. (See Part IV)

III. DISTRIBUTION OF RESPONSIBILITIES FOR CONTINUING EDUCATION.

A. The Graduate Library School at URI. It is recommended that URI-GLS:

1. Offer two courses per semester geared to the needs of practicing librarians at a time and location convenient to them.
2. Offer two institutes per year on topics of current and timely interest to the profession.
3. Continue the Colloquia series now being offered; some programs to be offered in the evening or on weekends to accommodate working librarians.
4. Encourage faculty participation in continuing education efforts by:
  - a. creating and funding a faculty position specializing in continuing education.
  - b. encouraging faculty to serve as resource persons, leaders, and consultants in their areas of expertise.
  - c. conducting research in areas related to continuing education, such as the efficiency of new and different modes of CE.

B. The Rhode Island Library Association. It is recommended that RILA:

1. Establish a continuing education standing committee within the association structure, namely the Steering Committee on Continuing Education. (Details in Part V)
2. Through its Steering Committee on Continuing Education, assess on an ongoing basis the priority CE needs of library personnel within the state.
3. Through its Steering Committee on Continuing Education keep its members abreast of continuing education developments on the regional and national scene.

4. Through its Steering Committee on Continuing Education, identify needed continuing education programs, either sponsoring them itself or recommending their sponsorship by the appropriate institution.

5. Through the RILA Bulletin make available information on continuing education programs.

6. Commit conference time and resources to continuing education.

7. Assist in setting standards and guidelines for continuing education programs.

C. The Department of State Library Services. It is recommended that DSLS, through the Department itself and through the interrelated library system:

1. Work to justify continuing education for librarians to the state funding body so that adequate support for such activities can be secured.

2. Continue to play a prime leadership role in developing needed workshops, institutes and seminars on topics of interest to the profession.

3. Continue to provide consultant services in all areas of library work.

4. Provide a link between individual libraries and nationwide and regional plans.

5. Provide a role model by instituting sound internal training and staff development programs.

IV. THREE-YEAR PLAN FOR CONTINUING LIBRARY EDUCATION IN RHODE ISLAND.

Implicit in the CLENE definition of continuing education is that CE should be provided for all levels of library personnel, both professional and supportive. Basic to the long range plan which follows is the concept that all library continuing education programs be open to all library personnel, although they may be geared more directly to one target audience than another.

A logical division of subject matter seems to exist in continuing education. Professional conferences and meetings introduce a topic, arousing interest, but rarely have time to go beyond that. Institutes and workshops offer an individual the opportunity to pursue one subject in some depth. Where even greater information on a topic is desired, a course may be the best vehicle. The committee recommends that topics having a well-defined body of knowledge be covered by more formal educational formats (courses, seminars, etc.). Newer, more provocative subjects are better served by conferences or meetings. Also, certain areas of knowledge in library science lend themselves to a regular updating of new developments: reference materials, serials, and technical services for example. In the three year plan that follows, the first year will be outlined in some detail. For the second and third years, suggested topics and formats will be offered.

CLENE

Recognizing continuing education as a top priority, the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science (NCLIS) funded a study on continuing education needs. In 1974 the Commission released the formal, final report of the project<sup>1</sup> which proposed a nationwide continuing education facility called the Continuing Library Education Network and Exchange (CLENE). This report was accepted by NCLIS as a feasible plan in May, 1974.

The basic missions of CLENE are:

1. To provide equal access to continuing education opportunities available in sufficient quantity and quality over a substantial period of time to insure library and information science personnel and organizations the competency to deliver quality library and information science to all; and
2. To create an awareness and a sense of need for continuing education of library and information science personnel on the part of employers and individuals as a means of responding to societal and technological change.

The organizational components of CLENE are an Assembly, a Steering Committee, an Administrative Board, a Panel of Review and Evaluation, a CLENE Executive Director and a small central staff. (See Figure 1) The latter carries out the main processes of CLENE and continuously serves as an exchange and resource facility for individual library personnel and for component groups who are members.

Membership in CLENE is available to any individual, institution, organization, library, association or agency concerned with library information or media continuing education. Benefits and services available to members are determined by the membership category schedule:

Individual--receive Newsletter (CLENExchange), vote in Assembly, reduced rates for Assembly registration and for CLENE publications and Directory of National Continuing Education Activities--$10.00 per year.

Institutional/Association--including libraries (other than State Libraries), and other groups or corporations receive all benefits of Individual members (for one Delegate) plus access to the Continuing Education Data Base, and assistance in continuing education planning--$200.00 per year.

Sustaining--all benefits of Institutional/Association members (for one Delegate) plus one copy of all CLENE Board, Advisory Committee Minutes, Quarterly and Annual Reports--$1,500.00 per year.

NOTE: State Library Agencies or Continuing Education Consortia of State Library Agencies may have membership fees supplied on request from CLENE.

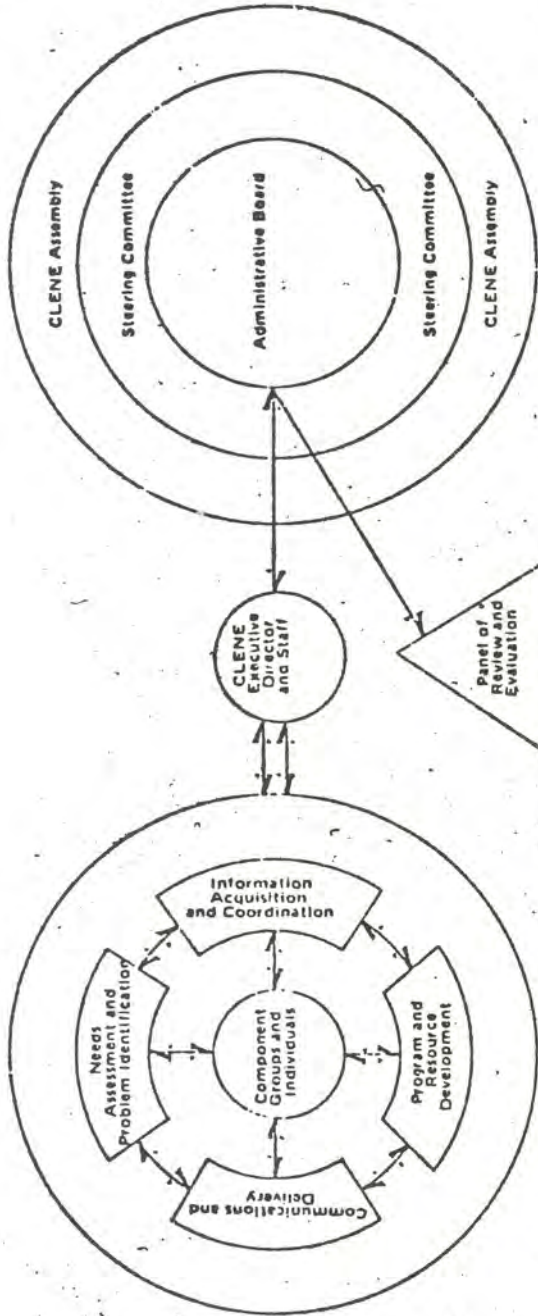

Presently, a Directory of National Continuing Education Activities is being compiled which will include workshops, institutes, seminars, as well as courses being offered throughout the country. This will be available on either an annual or semi-annual basis. In addition, a data base of continuing education activities is being created which will continually update this directory.

Continuing Education Units (CEUs)

CEUs are now being awarded by hundreds of educational institutions for completion of their non-credit, non-degree programs. Other organizations sponsoring CEUs are professional and technical societies, trade and industrial associations, government agencies, private companies, hospitals and similar institutions.

The National Task Force on the Continuing Education Unit defines the CEU as:

Ten contact hours of participation in an organized continuing education activity under responsible sponsorship, capable direction and qualified instruction.<sup>1</sup>

The CEU can provide the student with a record or official transcript of his continuing professional development for use in his present job or for a prospective employer. It can also be used for certification, recertification and grade advancement.

The CEU may be granted for programs in almost any format such as institutes, workshops, weekend seminars or mini-courses. To help in deciding which programs should or should not be granting CEU's, the National Task Force has formulated two sets of criteria: administrative criteria and program criteria. The administrative criteria define the kinds of institutions and organizations eligible to award CEUs. The program criteria provide the guidance to determine whether or not any individual activity qualifies for the awarding of CEUs.<sup>2</sup>

CEUs are not awarded for the following types of programs: programs for which credit is available, indoctrination, induction or orientation programs, committee meetings or other organizational work sessions, annual meetings or conventions of organizations or societies, mass media programs, life experience or work experience, or self-directed study and participation in the activities of an organization.<sup>3</sup>

Section III

REPORT OF THE SUB-COMMITTEE ON THE STATE-WIDE BORROWERS CARD OF
THE LONG RANGE PLAN IMPLEMENTATION COMMITTEE
OF THE RHODE ISLAND LIBRARY ASSOCIATION CHARGED AS FOLLOWS:

That there be introduced in Rhode Island a state-wide public library borrowers card.

The sub-committee on the State-wide Borrowers Card concentrated on examining the Connecticut and Nassau County, Long Island experiences with this concept and also looked for receptivity and possible obstacles to the idea in Rhode Island.

We considered our purpose to be to see if such an idea would be practical for Rhode Island since it had been recommended in the RILA Guidelines of 1974 and voted by RILA membership as priority number three of the proposals the original Long Range Plan Committee.

We searched library literature for articles on the subject and conducted a spot check of Rhode Island library directors' opinions of the idea. We checked existing library limitations in the State and corresponded with the New Hampshire State Library Office.

On last September 10, we conferred with Samuel Molod, Connecticut Associate State Librarian, at his office in Hartford and examined materials he and his staff gave us. On that day we also visited the New Britain, Conn., Public Library and talked with the director and her circulation-chief.

We studied detailed material supplied by the Director of the Nassau County Library System and in November met with the Director of the Department of State Library Services and some of her staff, and lastly, agreed upon the three recommendations in this report.

We think it would be good public relations and create a favorable image of libraries to offer this service and that the concept could be introduced in Rhode Island with few changes in existing library routines and for relatively little money because of our small size and the fact that most public libraries here already serve patrons living outside their geographical boundaries with out charge.

In the Connecticut experience with "Connecticard" and the Nassau County experience with "Direct Access", the Directors we consulted were enthusiastic about the service, said it was very popular with users, and that librarians were staying with it even if it did mean additional clerical reporting and staff time.

In both programs the idea was encouraged by paying each library which loaned more books to "outside" patrons than their own patrons borrowed elsewhere a sum of money for each "plus" transaction. In Connecticut there were no drop outs even though reimbursements from the State for each "plus" transaction dropped from ninety cents in 1974 to fifty-three in 1975. In Nassau County the reimbursement for number of items loaned above number of items borrowed is twenty-five cents a transaction.

A point noted in both systems was that there was no actual physical State or system-wide card. Everything was based on the patron presenting a local library card and being in good standing at his local library. In Nassau County patrons must have their cards stamped "Direct Access" by their library which will do this only if the patron owes no fine over $1.00.

There are no age limits in either program, that is, juveniles may use the service. In Connecticut materials may be returned to any public library; in Nassau County they may be returned only at the patron's own library or at the library where originally borrowed. Fines are paid at the library where books are returned. Lost book money goes to the library which owns the book. In Connecticut the lending library sends the first overdue notice to the patron directly but a final notice to the patron's home library.

In Connecticut the program is voluntary with 79 libraries participating and 40 not involved although their patrons may use the system. There are restrictions. In Nassau County no reserves are taken and no magazines, films, slides, tapes, records, microforms, pictures or A-V materials loaned to patrons not from the local area. In Connecticut no framed paintings, sculptures or films may be borrowed by non-residents but reserves are taken.

In Connecticut the annual cost of the program is $300,000. In Nassau County, more comparable in population size to Rhode Island although a third larger, the cost is $65,000 annually. In Connecticut Mr. Molod said the necessary money for the program was obtained because legislators saw clearly that this was a service for their constituents, and they were glad to introduce and support the legislation.

In Massachusetts, expanding the borrowing privilege beyond town lines has been written into the State standards. Within a set number of years a library which does not participate will lose its State grant. Some Massachusetts public libraries have already complied; others plan to give up the State grant, but it is believed the majority will take part.

A plan for Rhode Island would, of course, reflect the particular situation in our State which contains several libraries which charge a fee for non-resident use.

During the sub-committee meeting with the Director of the Department of State Library Services, Miss Drickamer suggested that the existing interlibrary loan network might be adversely affected, that the new program might be deemed a substitution for the existing one but agreed that the idea might be suitable for an RILA legislative effort some year when a carefully thought out plan and a bill to fund it might be introduced.

Recommendations:

This sub-committee recommends that the State-wide borrowers card be placed on the agenda of the Governor's conference on libraries for discussion.

Secondly, we recommend that an ad hoc committee be formed to draw up a plan for Rhode Island State-wide borrowing privileges which could be presented at regional or State-wide meetings for review and criticism or approval. This committee would consist of a member of the present sub-committee, a representative of the Department of State Library Services, a representative of the government relations committee, and two other interested librarians.

Thirdly, if sufficient support for the plan developed, the same committee and the government relations committee including the RILA lobbyist would write a bill to provide funds for the program. The two groups would then try to introduce the bill to the General Assembly in an appropriate year.

Appendix I

CONNECTICARD LIBRARY SERVICE RULES

(Note: Rules within curves are for the information of, and action by, librarians. They need not be made known to patrons.)

1. CARDS. A valid adult or juvenile public library card must be presented each time materials are borrowed. A card is deemed valid when it contains the name of the issuing library, the name and address of the person to whom it was issued, or, if a family card, the name and address of the head of the family, and a specific future expiration date.
2. LOANS. All library materials normally loaned by a library are available for loan except films, framed pictures, and sculpture.
3. CIRCULATION RULES. The rules governing circulation in the lending library control the loan. If possible, printed rules covering fines, term of loan, etc., shall be distributed to each non-resident patron at the time the loan is made.
4. RESERVES. Reserves and interlibrary loan requests will be accepted by the lending library under the same rules and policies applied to local residents.
5. RETURN OF MATERIALS. Materials may be returned to the library from which they were borrowed, to the home library, or to any public library in Connecticut. (If materials are returned to a library other than the one from which they were borrowed, it is the responsibility of the receiving library to return the materials via CONNECTICAR to the library from which they were borrowed.)
6. OVERDUES - FINES. Fines are paid when overdue materials are returned to the library from which they were borrowed. If materials are returned to a library other than the library from which borrowed, fines are paid to the library to which the return is made, payable at the rate normally charged by that library. All fine monies are to be retained by the library collecting them and are not refundable. Librarians returning materials to other libraries via CONNECTICAR should use the routing forms available from CONNECTICAR and indicate in section 5, of the form if a fine has been collected. (If fines are not paid when materials are returned, a notice of fines due should be sent to the home library to be collected, and retained, by the home library at time of re-registration or earlier.)
7. OVERDUES - NOTICES. Overdue notices are prepared by the lending library and sent to the home library for completion, if necessary, and mailing, telephoning, or other normal notice action.

7. copy of the final overdue notice is to be sent to the home library; the home library will contact the borrower and strongly urge him/her to return materials, pay any outstanding fines, and, if material is lost, to pay for lost material according to the policy of the lending library. The home library will notify the lending library of action taken and results obtained. The home library should refuse further service to the borrower if the amount owed to the lending library exceeds the home library's policy on eligibility of service. The home library should also notify the lending library, if it, the home library, would prefer to reimburse the lending library for materials and/or fines rather than have the claim referred to a commercial collection agency.
8. COLLECTION AGENCY. As a final step, in the retrieval of overdue and unreturned materials, the lending library may refer the case (with a duplicate report to the State Library) to the commercial collection agency operating state-wide or having affiliated agencies throughout the state selected to provide this service. Materials, or payment for lost materials, retrieved by the collection agency(ies) are returned by the State Library to the lending library; fees for collection are paid from funds collected by the collection agency.
9. LOST AND PAID BOOKS. Payments for lost or damaged material are payable to the lending library. Payments may be collected in the home library, but, unlike fines, are to be forwarded to the library which owned the material. Refunds for "found" books are made following the lending library's normal policy.
10. CLAIMED RETURNED MATERIAL. When a patron claims to the home library that an overdue item has been returned, the patron is referred to the lending library. After a search (or searches in accordance with the lending library's usual procedure) has been made in the lending library, the home library should be notified of the results of this search. The lending library should notify the home library when records are cleared.
11. TEACHERS' PRIVILEGES. Special loan privileges will not be extended to teachers and other groups except at the home library.
12. STATISTICS. Within five days after the last day of each month, a report of "no circulation" or a count of library materials circulated to non-resident borrowers during the preceding month by each library lending to non-residents is sent to the State Library on forms provided by the State Library. Records of losses of and damages to library materials by non-resident borrowers are supplied to the State Library for statistical purposes.

Appendix II

Direct access enables patrons with adult cards to procure books in person from any of the public libraries comprising the Nassau Library System. Two co-central libraries, Levittown and East Meadow offer reference service in-depth to borrowers with direct access cards. In order for the plan to work effectively for all direct access patrons, a uniform code of procedures has been adopted by the participating libraries.

REGISTRATION PROVISIONS

Any patron in good standing who is entitled to an adult resident's library card may have it stamped for the direct access privilege, which he must apply for in his home library.

The direct access privilege may also be extended to the out of district patrons of any library upon the payment of a minimum fee of $30.00 per year per family. Out of district patrons not desiring the direct access privilege will pay whatever annual fee entitles them to library privileges exclusively in the library they have elected to join.

A delinquent patron is defined as owing $1.00 or more in either money or materials or both. Under these conditions, he is not eligible for the direct access privilege.

LENDING & SERVICE POLICIES

Whatever free printed material is loaned by a library to its own patrons will be loaned to direct access cardholders. This material will include:

- Pamphlets
- Paperbound Books
- Children's Books
- All Adult & YA Books
- Pay Collection Books

This material will not include:

- Magazines
- Phonograph Records
- Films
- Framed Pictures
- Slides
- Micro-Form Materials
- Tapes
- Audio-Visual Equipment

The regulations governing the local borrower apply to the direct access patron with the following exceptions:

- Reserve and interlibrary loan services will not be extended to direct access patrons.
- Vacation loan privileges will not be extended to direct access patrons.
- Those exceptions do not apply to borrower's local library.

Reference and advisory service will be extended to direct access patrons when possible.

CIRCULATION REGULATIONS

All free printed material must be returned either to the lending or the home library. Pay collection material must be returned to the lending library.

Fines will be levied and collected by the library where the materials are returned. Any patron listed as a direct access delinquent will be denied direct access borrowing privileges until such time as he has cleared this delinquency.

When materials are acknowledged lost by a patron, the price to be charged may include a processing fee. Payment may be made either at the home or lending library.

The lending library will refuse to honor the direct access card of any patron who refuses to pay charges. The patron will be requested to turn in his card for return to his home library.

A PRIME ADVANTAGE of the Nassau Library System is that through shared resources, all of the public libraries of the County can provide reference services deeper and broader than the average local library could afford to maintain.

INTERLIBRARY LOAN . . . Books may be obtained for local patrons through interlibrary loan and will be delivered to the borrower's home library. The NLS Reference Department is in daily teletype contact with the State Library in Albany, New York, and can obtain books from this source. An added resource is the statewide interlibrary loan network which enables Nassau to call upon 12 of the largest research libraries in New York State for material about specific subjects.

CENTRAL LIBRARY AND SPECIAL COLLECTIONS . . .

Levittown and East Meadow Libraries share responsibility for providing reference service in depth to patrons of all member libraries. Special resources in the fields of Art and Music are at Hewlett-Woodmere, including extensive collections of sheet music, framed art prints and slides. Telephone directories of major U. S. cities may be consulted at Hicksville Library. Close to 200 Automotive Repair Manuals are at Levittown.

GOVERNMENT DOCUMENTS . . . A comprehensive collection of government documents is maintained at the System's Service Center at Roosevelt Field. While requests for materials are ordinarily received through member libraries, patrons are also served in person or by telephone from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., weekdays. (Telephone: 741-0060)

MICROFILMED MATERIALS . . . An extraordinary collection of microfilmed newspapers and periodicals (more than 600 different titles, many dating back to the first issue) is maintained by the Nassau Library System. Local public libraries will borrow reels for patrons to use on Microfilm readers in the library.

FOREIGN LANGUAGE BOOKS . . . Adult books in 17 languages are available for loan from the System Service Center through each local library. The Hempstead Public Library maintains a special collection of materials for children and teachers in grades K through 12 in Nassau County schools - open daily from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Spanish speaking readers are especially welcomed at Rockville Centre Library's Spanish Center.

LARGE TYPE AND TALKING BOOKS . . . County residents unable to read conventional print because of physical limitations may register for talking book service through their local libraries. Books in large type may also be borrowed locally for the reader with visual limitations.

REPORT OF THE SUB-COMMITTEE ON THE SCHOOL LIBRARY SPECIALIST
OF THE LONG RANGE PLAN IMPLEMENTATION COMMITTEE
OF THE RHODE ISLAND LIBRARY ASSOCIATION CHARGED AS FOLLOWS:

That the Rhode Island Library Association actively promote the appointment of a School Library Specialist in the State Department of Education.

In reply to the letter sent by the Sub-Committee in support of the Position Paper submitted to Dr. Thomas C. Schmidt, Commissioner of Education, by the Rhode Island School Media Association (RISMA), the Sub-Committee has determined that there is no plan at present to reinstate an earlier position or design a new position of School Library Specialist in the State Department of Education.

At one time the Department of Education had on their staff Subject Specialists, who consulted directly with individuals in schools throughout the state. Some time ago, the entire approach was changed: Generalists now are available for consultation; they serve as resource persons themselves and also as liaison with other persons or divisions in the Department. As this is basic to the department's organization, no changes are anticipated.

There is an ongoing effort for the development of certification standards for school media personnel through the state media organizations.

It has been suggested that the R.I. School Media Association might work toward changes in working conditions through an appeal to the appropriate Committee of the Board of Regents; these conditions are now contractual matters in the various school systems.

Recommendation from the Long Range Plan Implementation
Committee Requiring Executive Board and/or Membership Action

1. Appoint a Public Relations Subcommittee under the Public Affairs Committee.
2. Create within RILA, a standing committee to be called the Steering Committee on Continuing Education, the basic functions of which shall be promoting and coordinating continuing education programs for library personnel in the state. This Committee should be appointed by July 1, 1976.
3. RILA join the Continuing Library Education Network & Exchange (CLENE) as an institutional member.
4. That the Continuing Education Unit (CEU) be endorsed as a valid measure of non-credit educational activity and that its acceptance and use be recommended to those agencies planning continuing education programs and to library directors in granting recognition for staff development.
5. Through the RILA Bulletin make available information on continuing education programs.
6. Commit conference time and resources to continuing education.
7. Assist in setting standards and guidelines for continuing education programs.
8. Assist in appointing an ad hoc committee to pursue plans for state-wide borrowing privileges which could be presented at regional or state-wide meetings. This committee would consist of a member of the present subcommittee, a representative of the Dept. of State Library Services, a representative of the Government Relations Committee, and two other interested librarians.

Public Libraries are for all Seasons

- Gene Henry, Newport Public Library

Patrons come from across the spectrum of the community without regard to sex, race, religious persuasion or national origin. No person is excluded from participation in, or denied the benefits of, or otherwise subjected to discrimination.

Infants come in their mother's arms or in backpacks or perambulators. Once they reach preschool age (3-5) specific library service programs are designed for them in the form of story hours, books and movies. The library is conducting six separate group programs each week. A substantial portion of the library's total effort is directed toward support of the development of reading skills in young school children. A child's ability to read effectively is vital to building the essential foundation for learning and for a full appreciation of life. As a skill, reading ability requires continuing practice in order to master the increasing requirement as the child advances through elementary school grades.

The most important function of the bookmobile operation is to provide library service benefits to young children who are not able to visit the library regularly for lack of transportation or other reasons. About 75% of the bookmobile patrons are young children. The importance of this service to the future of Newport can be readily recognized. Since February, 1972 the bookmobile has circulated about 100,000 books on the Island.

Once a child moves into middle school and high school, the public library can become a key factor in expanding his horizons. Often school libraries are very limited in their collections. The time available to the individual student to use the school library is restricted to school hours and must be worked into busy schedules. An active program of monthly loans to teachers is carried out throughout the school year.

The reference collection for circulation as well as the restricted reference books to be used in the public library only have been purchased with emphasis on the objective of direct support to secondary and undergraduate level, school and college courses. Acquisition of non-fiction books, periodicals and microforms have accounted for at least 75% of the funds devoted to building up the collections of the library. A large number of the 3,500 or more patron visits to the library each week are secondary or undergraduate students. They come to do reference work in the library on books and periodicals either in hand or on microforms. They take out general reference books that are available to circulate and many come for a relatively quiet comfortable place to study in the afternoons or in the weekday evening until 9:00 p. m. and all day on Saturdays. For many students the public library is the best place that they have to study.

It has been said many times that the library can be the heart of serious educational effort. The Newport Public Library is trying very hard to be just that for the public school system of the City.

Adult services at the library are a challenge because of the wide variety of interests and are very significant, because, the great majority of all library services must be conducted on an individual basis. The student or young child usually has received some direction from parents or teachers, but a one to one relationship between the patron and

SRRT Job Hotline

The Social Responsibilities Round Table (SRRT) has for some time intermittently published a job hotline. In an effort to disseminate information more regularly the SRRT Job Hotline now appears monthly in the RILA Bulletin. We are anxious to make the "Hotline" as meaningful as possible and you can help. On July 15, 16, and 17, the Providence Public Library, the Providence Athenaeum and the Department of State Library Services will present "Providence '76 A Cultural Tapestry." On each of the days a series of programs will be presented by the various ethnic groups who have contributed to the heritage of Rhode Island. These programs will take place in Buraside Park (Kennedy Plaza) in downtown Providence, and will be coordinated by Haywood Chappell of D. S. L. S.

As this is a library "happenings," a focus will be on what libraries are doing to present and preserve the various ethnic cultures that have so enriched our state.

B. Rhode Island Library Association's Concerns Regarding Senate Bill 75-S728

The Rhode Island Library Association wishes to state for the Senate Committee on the Judiciary the following reservations concerning 75-S728.

1. The proposed legislation violates the citizen's freedom of access to materials which are protected by the first amendment to the United State Constitution. The legislation opens the way for those who would impose the limits of their own values on the freedom of citizens to choose what they would read and see.

2. The Association notes that a significant part of library holdings could be included under "public entertainment". It is a strength of a writer, or of anyone who composes a message by any medium, that valuable and worthy views may be couched in popular and entertaining terms. It would be detrimental to allow an arbitrary judgement based on this proposed law to interfere with the selection of books and other materials by an institution serving many thousands of citizens.

3. Within the definition of "promote", "lend" has always been the basic operation of public libraries and necessary to the function of other types of libraries. Other definitions of "promote" also apply to libraries. Similarly, the library patron, the citizen, is not exempted under the last paragraph of this bill because the citizen, whatever his motivation or qualification, is not necessarily attached to an institution which vouches for his need of inquiry.

4. It is not the intention of the Association to argue the value of any specific materials in opposing this bill as written. The Association seeks to insure for its member libraries, librarians and their clientele the right to choose and experience literature or other media, unhampered by those who would manipulate the law to impose their will on others.

C. The Story - by Bill Bergeron, Cranston Public Library

It seems a complete story - intellectual freedom was threatened and we responded. The bill was tabled by the Senate judiciary committee by vote of nine to three. This successful conclusion of the matter should give us a sense of accomplishment, but I, for one, am not satisfied that the accomplishment merits self-congratulation. RILA actually started badly and would have been caught unaware but for some earlier work by Kathy Paroline of Providence Public Library. She had contacted the Rhode Island Civil Liberties Union (RICLU) during a local organization campaign for the National Ad Hoc Committee Against Censorship. Then on Monday afternoon, March 22, Kathy Paroline, IFC chairperson, received a tip from Mike Dollinger, RICLU representative, that an anti-obscenity bill was to be heard in the Senate judiciary committee the following day. He wanted Library Association support in speaking against the bill at the hearing. A civil liberties union member had spotted the posted hearing and, after talking to Mr. Dollinger, brought a copy of the bill to Ms. Paroline at Providence Public Library.

Calls were made to IFC members, and to Jim Giles, RILA president. Committee members contacted other members of the library community. By evening, when Ms. Paroline called me, she had established a number of contacts but was losing a concurrent battle with the flu. She appointed me temporary chairperson and instructed me to work with Mike Dollinger and to lead the delegation at the hearing.

Tuesday morning produced a series of fortunate circumstances to smooth the progress of the job at hand. A telephone conversation with Mr. Dollinger brought about enough understanding of each other's positions to coordinate our presentations without a long exchange of details. After writing a draft statement, Myron Kirkes IFC member, was readily available by telephone for his criticism and editorial help. I work in the same building as RILA's president. Therefore, time to write, revise, type and copy our statement was immediately given and signatures were affixed without the delay of shuttling papers from one place to another. How many of us succeed, especially in a rush situation, without having to improvise or leave out a component of a task?

The librarians who came for the hearing, Curt Bohling, David Green, Myron Kirkes, and I, met Mr. Dollinger, and Milton Stanzler (representing the Motion Picture Association of America) at the hearing room. No one came to speak for the bill. The majority leader and ex-officio member of all committees, Senator Hawkins, who had introduced the bill, was present but did not speak. Twelve of the fifteen members of the committee attended the hearing.

The presentation of arguments could not have gone better if rehearsed. Mr. Stanzler pointed to problems with the supreme court obscenity decisions and the difficulty of enforcing this proposed law, especially with regard to commercial film. Mr. Dollinger pointed out the dangers to first amendment freedoms in a position statement and address. The RILA statement stressed dangers to libraries and in my address, I cautioned the senators that, rather than fighting pornography in the market place, the bill would open the way for self-styled censors to interpret the law to facilitate forcing their views on public institutions.

Among the questions I was asked was "Who belongs to this library association?" and, to the point, one senator asked "Would you give this filth (pointing to the bill) to a thirteen-year-old girl?" To which I replied, "We hold the position to open access to our collections and, YES, regardless of age. This is an American Library Association position to which we subscribe. Of course, we do respect the existing law regarding minors." The question was raised whether there are laws pertaining to minors. The sad commentary on this question is that the laws pertaining to minors are articles of the same chapter this bill was to amend!

Here Mr. Bohling deserves congratulations for his insight in speaking to the senators of cases, using the Bible-as-a-dirty-book ploy, and responding to questions about modern literature and media. His remarks were an appropriate conclusion to our point that, reduced to specifics, the law not only presented enforcement problems but also put cultural phenomena within the limitations of law, endangering the flow of ideas in our society.

Now that the bill, for all practical purposes, has died some questions will remain unanswered. They are still worth consideration. Why was the bill, introduced early last session, suddenly revived and put first on the day's agenda? Someone with influence could have brought it to some senator's attention. Maybe a group needed new munitions to defend the moral fabric of their country. Perhaps "decency" will become a campaign issue. In the rush to finish the session, could the unopposed bill have passed easily? Why was Senator Hawkins present at that hearing and not at the newsmaking no-fault insurance hearings? It seems against good political sense to be in one room when the television cameras are in the other. Why did no one come to speak for the bill? Were the censors sure of its passage? Or were they sure of our apathy?

The third in a series of local demonstrations of computerized circulation systems was held at Warwick Public Library April 29 by the 3M Company. While the hardware is impressive, some caution was expressed over the fact that it had not yet been tried in libraries. See Dick Robbins, Warwick Public Library, for further information. The first and second demonstrations, of CLSI and Gaylord systems, were held at the Providence and Pawtucket Libraries respectively.

Jim Giles, RILA President, travelled to the nation's capital for ALA Legislative Day, and notes that things are looking more optimistic. Gerald Ford is making more positive overtures about a White House Conference on Libraries, and the House Judiciary Subcommittee has ammended the copyright revision bill somewhat in favor of libraries. The ammendment says that nothing should prohibit library or archive copying for inter-library loan arrangements unless those arrangements constitute a substitute for subscription and purchase. On the local level, Giles finds the situation for new R. I. library funding legislation "not too hopeful" this year.

The March 1976 Rhode Island Medical Journal is a special issue honoring Helen Moffitt DeJong, Librarian of the R. I. Medical Library. Mrs. DeJong, retiring after 46 years afiliation with the Library, is credited in the feature article with organization of the Library's collection, expansion of its public services, outstanding ability to provide reference service equal to that of major medical units in New England, and preservation of the R. I. Medical Society's rare book collection. Most fittingly the Library's rare book room has been named after Mrs. DeJong in commemoration of her distinguished work.

The staff of the Pawtucket Public Library is presently completing the first comprehensive history of the City in over 40 years. Since the Library's business is information, and there has been a continuous demand for this kind of information, the Library has felt obliged to compile this particular history. As part of the Bicentennial, the people of Pawtucket will soon have the opportunity to learn more about the industrial, social, military and political growth of their city through this "HISTORY OF PAWTUCKET 1635-1976". This comprehensive 250-page publication will contain eleven chapters, an index, preface, conclusion, bibliography, photographs, plus a list of subscribers. The printing will be letter press on acid-free stock and have a buckram binding (hard cover cloth). The inside front and back covers will carry a panoramic picture of the City of Pawtucket. Chapter three has already appeared in preview form in the Bicentennial Supplement to the Pawtucket Times of December 31, 1975. Publication target date: July 4, 1976.

Myron Kirkes reports that librarians from around the state participated in the Warwick Mall display for the "Week of the Young Child" April 26-30.

Many, many thanks to those Bulletin readers who have been returning issues of Bulletins that they've read to us. Because of limited printing of each issue to hold down costs, we sometimes find an unexpected demand for earlier issues catches us short. Such a demand has occurred this year with requests from a number of graduate library schools for back runs. At present we still need issues of the Bulletin for every month since June 1975.

CHILDREN'S ROUND TABLE

On April 13 the New England Roundtable of Children's Librarians met at the Adams Shore Branch Library in Quincy, Mass.

The program was titled "Free To Be..." and dealt with eliminating sexism from programming for children. Pawtucket children's librarians Emma Baron and Joodie Perlow report that it involved a student film entitled "Anything you want to be," dealing with attitudes toward career choices faced by a young woman of high school age. The film clearly showed that although parents and guidance counselors pay lip service to freedom of choice, what really won approval for the young lady was acceptance of the role of wife and mother. An open discussion of personal experiences followed on parental attitudes, with several women citing instances in which they were discouraged from striving after traditionally "male" careers. The program also included a videotaped story hour which featured a book on a woman veterinarian and a singing game for the children, stressing women in non-stereotyped occupations. A concluding lecture and discussion focused on how one can eliminate or "play down" the sexist elements inherent in folk tales and the oral tradition. Some present felt that folk tale heroes could, in some cases, be presented as heroines without altering content and meaning. Others suggested finding tales involving heroines, or adding less passive attributes (such as cleverness, wisdom, fearlessness) to tales where all women play subservient roles.
