According to the instructor, “This class examines the causes, consequences and ‘cures’ of political corruption across a variety of geographic contexts.”

We should be able to support this course bibliographically.

In reviewing the PSC 325 course proposal and the syllabus that Professor Rundlett has submitted as required, including bibliography, we hold the vast majority of materials needed. Those we don’t are in serials or monographs which can be found at other libraries through interlibrary loan.

We are able to add whatever appropriate monographic needs may arise for the instructor for this course, but we cannot add any new journal titles for Political Corruption except through a drop/add policy that requires the department to identify a journal title (of equal value) it would like to drop from its serials list to permit the addition of another. Our monographic holdings in political corruption are good as is our journal collection. Our online indexes and abstracts covering the subject specifically should more than meet the demands of this course.
