For NFS Global Nutrition, the students will complete required readings, and will conduct research. The URI Libraries currently hold all the journals listed as critical in the Library Questionnaire. Per the syllabus, the required textbook is available for free online, and the required readings will be posted on Sakai. The Libraries do not currently appear to have the books listed as other recommended readings, but could readily purchase these books for the collection. According to the Library Questionnaire, no supplementary library resources will be required.

Based on the Libraries' New Course Proposal form and a review of the syllabus, in my role as subject selector, I conclude that the Libraries can fully support this course through existing resources.
