

Acknowledgements

This research would not have been possible without the contribution of Nigerian survivors of sex trafficking. Thank you for breaking your silence to share your experiences and insights for this study. Your stories are critical in understanding the dynamics of sex trafficking from Nigeria to Italy and in developing more effective prevention and protection programs.

My gratitude to the professionals who are daily advocates for the rights and well being of sex trafficking victims. Your extensive experience provided invaluable insights to this research. Many thanks to the following contributors:

Dr. Esohe Aghatise, Associazione IROKO Onlus &
Edo State Task Force Against Trafficking
Dr. Simona Taliani, Il Centro Franz Fanon & University of Turin Princess Inyang Okokon, PIAM Onlus
Uchenna Uzoije, PIAM Onlus
Sister Margherita De Blasio, Il Mandorlo, Franciscan Sisters of Susa Reverend
Davide Rostan, Waldesian Church of Susa
Paolo Botti, Associazione Amici di Lazzaro
Dr. Aldo Virgili, Department of Public Health
Dr. Maria-Chiara Monti, Associazione Centro Penc
Dr. Filippo Casadei, Associazione Centro Penc
Tatiana Kotlyarenko, Organization for Cooperation and Security in Europe

To Domenica Mammi and Ruby Till of Associazione IROKO Onlus for your instrumental assistance in language interpretation, cultural mediation services, and coordination of research participants.

To Helen Dike and Joy Bernard for your significant contribution in language interpretation and coordination of research participants.

To the YWCA in Turin, Italy for your generosity in sharing your facilities to conduct interviews.

To my thesis advisor, Dr. Dorchen Leidholdt, for your invaluable support, guidance, and wisdom.

To my husband, Bill, and my children, Godsway, Koku, and Mensah, for your patience, love, and encouragement as I pursued my degree.