
[kbart_interest] Join us on Monday for a Free KBART Webinar from NISO!

1 message

NISO Announce <niso-announce@niso.org>

Fri, Mar 8, 2019 at 9:29 AM

To: Kimberly Graham <kgraham@niso.org>, Jill O'Neill <joniell@niso.org>, Sara Groveman <sgroveman@niso.org>

KBART (Knowledge Bases And Related Tools) is a NISO Recommended Practice that's been around for most of this decade. KBART concentrates on a description for metadata transfer, to support a content provider's communication of journals and monograph information to knowledge bases maintained by link-resolver vendors. It's so ubiquitous in many scenarios that librarians and publishers might easily take KBART for granted, but a closer look can reveal its utility and flexibility in the electronic product landscape and how it is put to use to support dependable end-user access to library resources.

On Monday, March 11, at Noon Eastern Time, NISO will host a FREE 60-minute webinar, to discuss KBART from soup to nuts and highlight its value to those who use it, and those who could use it. This webinar will take the place of the monthly NISO Open Teleconference, so there will also be opportunities for questions and answers and discussion about KBART.

The webinar will include an overview of the knowledge base supply chain and perspectives of participants; how the KBART Standing Committee members contribute to its ongoing development; how KBART endorsement works with the KBART Registry; and an update on what's next for KBART.

Confirmed Speakers Include:

- Noah Levin, NISO KBART Standing Committee Co-Chair
- Dominic Benson, Analytics and Discovery Officer, Brunel University London
- Ben Johnson, Provider Relations Engagement Manager, ProQuest/Ex Libris
- Robert Heaton, Collection Management Librarian, Utah State University Libraries
- Andrée Rathemacher, Head, Acquisitions, University of Rhode Island Libraries.

Please click this link to join the webinar: <https://zoom.us/j/210255256> to join us at 12 Noon (Eastern Daylight, US & Canada), Monday, March 11 for this free informational webinar.

Got questions? Get in touch:

NISO
3600 Clipper Mill Road
Suite 302
Baltimore, MD 21211-1948
Phone: +1.301.654.2512
Email: nisohq@niso.org