FOOTBALL

CAPT. SHERWIN

The football season of 1913 opened with the brightest prospects for several seasons. Twenty-five men reported to Captain Sherwin for preliminary practice before the opening of college. This practice consisted mainly in kicking, running down under punts, and in falling on the ball. Scrimmaging was indulged in but to a slight degree, but by the twenty-third of September, registration day, the squad had hardened up and each night gave the student body a good exhibition of football. The squad had brought out an abundance of material and with only two positions to fill through the loss of graduates the omens for a successful season seemed to be exceptionally auspicious. Too heavy a schedule and a long list of injuries broke up the team before the season had fairly started and turned our hopes into despair.

Too much praise cannot be given Captain Sherwin for his work behind the line. Sherwin's spirit was the backbone of both the offense and defence in every game he took part in.

Coach Ashbaugh's work cannot be criticized in any way. He worked hard and earnestly throughout the season and with an even break of luck would have turned out a winner. If anything, he overworked the team rather than underworked it the first part of the season.

Manager Reiner held the managerial reins in a clever and consistent fashion and had his team at heart in every game both at home and away.

Rhode Island played its best game in its opening appearance against Amherst, but lost by the score of 10-0. Line weaknesses which were evident throughout the season explain the defeat.

Both teams played hard and aggressive football, Amherst holding a slight advantage. The work of the opposing fullbacks, Sherwin and McGay, was the feature of the game.

Brown recovered from a humiliating defeat by Colby and swamped R. I.'s aspirations for a victory in the annual game by the score of 19-0. Rain and a wet field, the Brown management said, prompted them to postpone the game from Saturday to the following Wednesday. But this Wednesday, the field was just as bad as it had been on the previous Saturday. Brown had however mastered her new formations in the intervening time and had little trouble in defeating us.

McIntosh played a good defense game and Sherwin shone on both offense and defense, taking the brunt of the latter.

With six Varsity men out of the game on account of injuries as a result of the first two games, Rhode Island had no show against the superior Maine team, losing by a score of 44-0.

With many thanks to the timekeepers for a little extra time at the end of both halves, Colby managed to beat R. I., 19-6. Although R. I.'s team was somewhat crippled they played a hard, consistent game and with a fair show would have finished with a closer score at least.

Although Webb broke his nose early in the game, he pluckily stuck it out, and scored R. I.'s six points on two pretty drop kicks.

Rhode Island scored its lone victory over Fort Adams in a field of mud and water.

The first score came in the third period when Edmonds blocked a Fort Adams' punt and Ebbs fell on the ball behind the line. A little later McLeod went over from the 15-yard line, for the second touchdown. Price kicked the goal on the first touchdown.

Only during the second half did Rhode Island show her real ability. During this time the work of the whole team was all that could be asked for.

Rhode Island journeyed to Durham a week later only to be defeated by our old rivals. Inability of the line to open holes for the backs and the inability of the backfield to stop the New Hampshire forward passes, explains the defeat. New Hampshire's ability at the open game was the superior point that won the game for them.

Rhode Island's last game, a defeat by Boston College, by a score of 27-0, was the most unsatisfactory game of the season. Constant squabbling among the players and officials marred the game from start to finish.

Boston scored all its points in the first half, three of the four touchdowns resulting from long runs after forward passes. During the second half neither team showed any superiority.

Leroy B. Newton of Fairhaven, Mass., was elected captain of the team for next year shortly after the end of the season. He played halfback on the eleven for three years being a great ground gainer in the open field and also a clean and fearless defensive player. Captain Newton's leaving college, however, in February, brought a cloud of gloom over the campus and necessitated the selection of another man for the captaincy. Wesley C. Brigham, '16 of Pawtucket, R. I., was chosen thereupon. Captain Brigham, the most popular and hard working lineman on the team, has played tackle for the past two years.

By the loss of the five seniors, Captain Sherwin, Newton, Tully, Webb and Webster, the team of next season is suffering a severe handicap, but, under the leadership of Brigham, the giant forward, there should be no reason why the football standard of Rhode Island State cannot be brought up to its former high standard.

Although the team as far as winning is concerned had a very unsuccessful season, still this unfortunate occurrence has in a way been of considerable benefit to Rhode Island football. Accidents, time and again, gave opportunities to untried men, who, after a good taste of college football and along with it the sting of defeat, have gained confidence in themselves and have come from the battle experienced. These men, with the regulars, and the members of the Freshman and Sophomore teams of last year, especially the former, for there is considerable varsity material in 1917, should return next fall and strive most ardently to give Rhode Island a victorious team in 1914.

Those men who received their letters for the gridiron work were: Captain Sherwin, Webb, Tully, Webster, Newton, all '14; Price, Hanlin, McIntosh, Jackowitz, of 1915; and Ebbs, Seifert, Lloyd, McLeod and Captain-elect Brigham of 1916, and Manager Reiner, '14.

The scores of the season were:

Rhode Island	0—Amherst	10
Rhode Island	0—Brown	19.
Rhode Island	0—Maine	44.
Rhode Island	6—Colby	10.
Rhode Island	13—Fort Adams	0.
Rhode Island	0—New Hampshire	13.
Rhode Island	0—Boston College	27.

BASEBALL

CAPT. ELECT SULLIVAN

Late in February, Captain Newton issued a call for candidates for baseball. About twenty new men, in addition to those who had played on the team the preceding year, reported and worked out daily in Lippitt Hall until the diamond on the athletic field was put in shape for outdoor practice. The first cut saw some ten men off the list and each afternoon a much snappier practice. By the seventeenth of April, the date of the opener, the team appeared in fine trim, but disheartening defeat greeted their efforts, the score being Bowdoin, 14; Rhode Island, 4.

Meyer was on the mound for Rhode Island and for the first six innings he kept the Maine boys well in hand but luck broke favorably on the visitors in the last three innings and they galloped off with the game, errors by the home team helping them to a considerable extent in the run-getting.

On the following Saturday, Rhode Island took an overtime game from Boston College, the score being 5 to 4 in ten innings. Timely hitting by the homesters in the last round decided the game. It was the most interesting and exciting game of the season, with the home team displaying its best form behind the superb pitching of Meyers. Rhode Island started scoring in the second. Seifert singled, stole second, and came home on an error. Boston took a two-run lead in the sixth. Rhode Island tied the score by scoring in the eighth and ninth. Lennox got a free pass, stole second and third, and came home on Meyer's single. In the ninth Seifert singled, stole second, and trotted to the plate on Briden's timely wallop. The tenth told the story for Rhode Island. Lennox got a life on an error, stole second, took third on Sullivan's single, while Sullivan took second on the throw in. Hudson's big stick brought both men in on a pretty single to center.

The third game, with Saint Michael's College, was a defeat for Rhode Island but the team held together well throughout the nine innings and lost only from an inability to hit the Green Mountain pitcher when hits meant runs. This game coming as a defeat so soon before the Brown game blasted the hopes of some but instilled a stronger fighting spirit into the players.

With the exception of the first inning, when St. Michael's scored two runs, both teams played an exceptionally even game. Both pitchers were in form, and the teams fielded well. St. Michael's started scoring in the first inning. O'Malley's single was followed by two errors and a fielder's choice, which allowed O'Malley and McGraw to score. Rhode Island gained a run in the last of the second. Newton singled, stole second, and came home on Nichol's two-bagger. The last score was made in the eighth. Tully reached first on an error, was sacrificed by Newton and scored on an error. Hudson was the individual star of the game, while Coleman worked in clever form on the mound.

With a host of rooters who walked, autotomiled, freight-trained and parlor-carred to Providence, the Rhode Islanders went into the Brown camp toned up to the point of carrying off the Bear, but were sent away empty-handed. The annual game went to Brown, 5-1. Inability to solve Cram's delivery when hits meant scores told the story of defeat.

For the Brown nine, Crowther, the diminutive shortstop, started with a clean slate on ten chances, while Briden and Price for Rhode Island each made a hair-raising catch of bids for triples. Nichols caught a steady game, throwing to the bases in major league fashion. The first three innings were about even. Meyer held the Brown batters powerless, and Cram seemed to have the Indian sign on the Rhode Island batters when men were on the bases. Although the game was almost entirely devoid of features, it was interesting and the result pleasing, though not all that was hoped for by the good-sized contingent of R. I. supporters.

Brown scored two runs in the fourth on a pass, an error of a difficult fly to left, a double by Andrews, and a scratch hit by Dukette. Another score came in the fifth on two hits and a sacrifice. One run was scored in the seventh and eighth on two hits and a sacrifice, and on a hit, a pass and a long sacrifice fly to center.

Rhode Island scored her only tally in the ninth with two down. Seifert doubled and came home on an error.

Loose fielding and weak batting were responsible for Rhode Island's defeat at the hands of Trinity in a listless thirteen-inning game. The home team had the game well in hand on several occasions but fumbles and poor throws behind Coleman dragged the game into the extra innings. "Coley" pitched winning ball and deserved to win.

Rhode Island tied up the score at four all in the sixth inning when Briden knocked three runs in. From that time on, neither team scored until the thirteenth when Trinity got three singles in a row and won the game. Nichols, behind the bat, caught a splendid game, nailing runner after runner on the bases.

Rhode Island met a bad reverse at New York in the following game when Fordham romped off with a 16-4 game. The game started off bright enough for R. I., Meyer striking out the first three at bat and Lennox banging out a homer in the second with two on bases. Fordham got to Meyer, however, in the fourth and scored seven runs, after which R. I. had no chance.

In a hotly contested game at Durham, N. H., New Hampshire nosed out a victory from R. I., the score being six to five. The two teams were evenly matched until the tenth. Both pitchers received good support. Coleman pitched good ball until he weakened in the tenth when Meyer relieved him but was unable to check the batting rally. Bissell did clever work for New Hampshire.

In the last of the ninth with one man down McPheters got a scratch hit, but was forced out at second by Jones. Jones scored a minute later on Burbee's two-bagger. Cram flied out to Sullivan, leaving the score 2-2.

In the tenth Sullivan flied out to McPheters. Hudson and Newton both walked and both scored on Tully's two bagger to left. Tully came home on Briden's single. The three runs looked pretty good but they were not enough. Reardon walked, Gale and Bissell singled, filling the bases. Meyer relieved Coleman, but could not stop the batting rally. Brackett and Fernald singled driving in two runs and McPheters drove a long sacrifice fly to center, scoring Bissell. Jones followed with a scratch hit, sending Brackett across the pan with the fourth and winning run.

Briden and McPheters were the heavy stickers, both getting three hits out of four times at bat. Tully's timely double in the tenth was one of the batting features. Sullivan's ability at spearing long flies was the feature of the fielding.

Rhode Island finished the season by easily winning from Norwich 10-0. At no time did R. I. have any particular trouble to keep Norwich from crossing the pan. Interest in the game began to wane after the sixth inning, for it was then evident that Meyer was master of the situation. Meyer worked in fine form, allowing but one safe hit.

The game offered R. I. batters a fine chance to raise their batting averages, the team coralling fourteen hits off Murray's delivery, each man getting one or more hits. Tully led with two doubles and a single out of five times at bat.

Meyer scored R. I.'s first tally in the third. Meyer, Sullivan, Hudson and Newton singled scoring Meyer and Sullivan. R. I. put the game on ice in the sixth with four tallies. Newton walked, Tully doubled, Murray hit Seifert, Briden and Nichols doubled, scoring Newton, Tully, Seifert, and Briden.

Three more runs came in the seventh. Errors on Hudson's and Newton's grounders, a single by Tully, a double by Seifert and singles by Hudson and Nichols scored Newton and Tully. Two more runs came across in the eighth on Newton's and Tully's doubles.

Tully and Meyer starred for R. I. Munsell played a good game behind the bat for Norwich.

Although the list of results of the season's games is not written wholly with wins nevertheless in due consideration of the team itself it must be said that the luck that decides many a ball game did not spangle on our side. The nine, although a loser in six of the eight contests was a far better one than the scores would indicate. Two games were lost in extra innings. The last contest in which R. I. whitewashed Norwich would seem to show that the ball tossers had just hit their pace. The personnel of the team also points to the fact that few, if any, organizations that have represented R. I. on the diamond have been any better as regards individuals. In Coleman and Meyer we may be justly proud of two of the best pitchers in New England collegiate circles.

Nichols, as a backstop, was hard to beat, with his buoyant fighting spirit. The infield, with Seifert, Tully, Lennox and Captain Newton, formed a breastwork that a ground ball could not pierce. The gardeners, Sullivan, Hudson, Briden, and Price were each men that could be relied upon.

The prospects for next season are more than bright with only a loss of Briden and Captain Newton. Under the leadership of Captain-elect John L. Sullivan, the veteran outfielder, R. I. will be represented by the fastest team in its history.

The scores for the past season were:

- Rhode Island, 4; Bowdoin, 14.
- Rhode Island, 5; Boston College, 4.
- Rhode Island, 3; St. Michaels, 5.
- Rhode Island, 1; Brown, 5.
- Rhode Island, 4; Trinity, 5.
- Rhode Island, 4; Fordham, 16.
- Rhode Island, 3; New Hampshire, 4.
- Rhode Island, 10; Norwich, 0.

TRACK MEETINGS

With meets in view with New Hampshire and Tufts, candidates for varsity track were more numerous than ever before. Practice began on the first of April and continued strenuously until the inter-class meet, which aided in the choice for entries for the New Hampshire meet.

New Hampshire won the first meet on their own field by the score of 74 to 34.

With Tabor, Coleman, and Kinney, we were well fortified in the running events, but New Hampshire had us more than balanced in the weight and field events.

The Tufts meet, held on our own athletic field, was a victory for the visitors. Atwater of Tufts, with three firsts in the distance runs, and Capt. Irons of Rhode Island, with two in the hurdles, were the stars of the meet. Rhode Island was especially weak again in the field and weight events. The score was Tufts, 75; Rhode Island, 33.

WOMEN'S ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

ADA L. HARDING .....	President
ADELAIDE G. WATSON .....	Vice President
EMELIE M. CURRAN .....	Secretary
ANNIE S. HOXIE .....	Treasurer

This association is young and but little progress has been made this year. Basketball is enjoyed, but owing to the limited time that the gymnasium is accessible to the women, the game does not reach a high degree of attainment. A tennis tournament was arranged, but because of the delay in preparing the courts, the tournament was not completed.
