HARRIS INSTITUTE LIBRARY

Harris Institute Library owes its existence to the public spirit and generous munificence of Edward Harris, who did so much to advance the prosperity and well-being of Woonsocket. About 1850, the Carrington Library Association, of which Edward Harris was the first president, came into existence.

Several years after this association had been formed, Mr. Harris withdrew from it to protect and execute plans for the erection of a building for the Institute of greater proportions and more extensive scope. As a preliminary of this object, he erected in 1856-7 the Harris Institute Library, which serves to provide a place for his enterprises as well as to secure an income for their maintenance. In 1863 he secured the passage of an act by the general assembly incorporating the "Harris Institute" and later presented the trustees with a deed of the foregoing property, to be held for the purposes expressed in the act. This property was valued at $70,000 and it was stipulated that the revenue arising therefrom should secure privileges which, under moderate restrictions, might be freely enjoyed by all the citizens of Woonsocket and vicinity. In 1865 Mr. Harris added to his previous gift a gift of $2000. This money, together with the rentals from the building, was used in purchasing about 4000 volumes for the library, in rooms prepared for it in the second story of the Institute. This was formally opened to the public in October, 1865, and was the first free library in the state.

Later this building, including the library, became the property of the City of Woonsocket.

GRACE H. HALL, Librarian.

WOONSOCKET MEETING

 Luncheon will be served in the ballroom of the Blackstone Hotel. The cost of the luncheon will be seventy-five cents.

An exhibit and demonstration of methods of book repairing will be given from 2 to 3 o'clock, showing work done by the W. P. A. under the auspices of the State Library.

OUR SPEAKERS

Mr. Campbell B. Beard is a member of the Brown University faculty in the Department of Political Science. Miss Maribelle Cormack is assistant to the Director of the Museum, Roger Williams Park. She is also author of two popular books for children, "The Wind of the Vikings" and "The Runner of the Trail." With William P. Alexander, she co-authored one other book, "Jacques the Goatherd" and "Horns of Gurt."

Dr. Redda Korsch, head of the German Department of Wheaton College, Norton, Mass., has taught in progressive schools in Germany and Sweden. Before the war she was actively interested in the German Youth Movement, especially in those that concerned the advancement of women's education. She, herself, received one of the first doctorates granted to a woman.

REGIONAL CONFERENCE

Mr. Clarence E. Sherman, Librarian of the Providence Public Library, has been elected delegate from Rhode Island to attend the meeting in November which will arrange for the next regional conference of Librarians of New England.

ADDRESS BY GRACE SHERWOOD
State Librarian, at the Spring library meeting

The other evening I drank a cup of coffee, strong and large, floating heavy cream on top, an old Welsh custom, sipping first the velvety texture of the elixir of mooey-cow and then the tincture of the coffee bean savoring through — as dark strength of tree trunk comes through the thin film of Spring loveliness.

Towards the small hours of early morning, having ticked the sheep on the mental adding machine and addressed my maternal and paternal grandparents from their airy perch on the respective bed posts, I gave up the unequal contest, snapped on the rending light and found this in "A Prairie Grove":

"Of the prairie province they say that the seas made it. Its bones are of coral, of diatoms, and protozoan microscopic animals. A little later, in the course of millennia that cannot be reckoned, the fishes made it. And then, when the bed of the sea was uplifted and it became dry land, rain fell on it, and the tropical clump mosses grew in the marshes tall as trees. When the Carboniferous wind blew in their awkward branches, the golden nugs were piled like snow drifts in the peat. So were the coal measures laid down, and sometimes a fern leaf, broken by an amphibian foot, fell in the ooze to leave its imprint there."

"The seas came back, and the continent uneasily shouldered them off again. Each time the great waters came and went they laid down the deep layers of death, out of which life was born. It took all of that — all that growth and dying and time measured off by the millions of years of planetary revolution around the sun — to make the Indian corn grow so tall and taste so like an August day.

Savoring Peattie's rhythm in prose, his cadences as tall and graceful as the grasses filling the prairie spaces under the sky — I cannot wait to share my discovery with someone who has not known the joy of Peattie, the naturalist, singing of the convocation of amphibians, of green frogs plucking their 'cello strings to the aqueous and lonely rim of March.

If you believe heart and soul in your Library; if you have something precious there, share it with your constituency. You cannot confine your attention just to the technical handling of material, its proper placing on the shelves, its automatic charging out and check off in return, just the routine posting of book reviews and publishers' blurbs. There must be within you more than just the collector of rare documents. You have to be a sort of super-salesman, selling your Library to your constituency with that never ending urge to share with generosity the nuggets of gold in the stacks. It may demand upon the degree of missionary spirit which we have inherited from that rugged past when our forefathers thought nothing of crossing turbulent oceans to spread the gospel into dark continents, but I do feel that every librarian must put themselves out, indeed it is their responsibility to attempt to enlarge the circle of friends and believers. When so much beauty is caught in the paragraphs of a book like Peattie's "A Manac for Moderns," and always in the Spring also, in the "Wind In the Willows," or in "Fiddler's Green," where the little sisters of the ground swell sing to keep the tides in step — or where map or brochure or rare document, priceless rich in literary content or bibliographical research, are known to you because it is your job to know them, then I claim that it is a privilege and a duty to bring these matters to the attention of the constituency.

There is a great joy in accomplishment, in watching something develop to greater usefulness with more secure foundation, but that joy may well be shared by many. It is a hard task to make your library grow and the more friends you have who share your purpose the more numerous the ripples on the Lake of Community Indifference. I think people are wonderful in the way they respond to a little coaxing and something straight from the shoulder, but you will have to nourish the missionary spirit within yourselves first before you can sow the seed of enlightenment. Find out what your community would really like through these new friends. Encourage them to tell you the truth and not just please you for the sake of social amenity and then try to expand your collections along the lines based upon a true study of your Community needs.

Friends of your Library will also mean friends in search of ways and means to bring gifts for the purchase of more books. We cannot be insular; nor can we afford to be afraid to make and speak to these friends. It is not for ourselves that we are seeking new avenues of expansion. It is for the good of the whole and on that unselfish premise we have a right to try to grow in endeavor and output.
